BIG GUS surveyed Sheila's pretty and determined face with a mixture of admiration and anger.

"She your sister?" he demanded of Mickey.

"Sure," said Mickey. He looked as if Maggio had just connected with another of those rights to the head. Puzzled and a little groggy. "But what's the big idea, Sheil? This fellow here"—indicating Brad—"bounces into the showers and broad-A's me to a song and dance about somebody looking for me. But I didn't tumble it was you. Say, what you doing here, anyhow, Sheil?"

Big Gus's gaze was fixed on Sheila, greedily drinking in her youth and loveliness. The racket boss had a weak spot for Sheila's type—the kind he couldn't have.

"You was in the same row as me," he said to her. Then to Brad, "So was you. I peg you now. When you showed up down there in the lockers I thought you was after this boy trying to sign him up. You ain't, huh? Because I'll tip you right now, I've got first call on him. And if that don't register, did you ever hear of Gus Mornick? That's me."

2-Gun Thug Gets $750 In Holdup

The same thug, with an accomplice, obtained $3000 in a stickup at the brewery last November.

As Lionel Bechard, a salesman, stopped his car in front of the brewery at 8:30 a. m., the robber thrust two pistols against him and ordered him to start the motor. Then he made Bechard march in front of him into the office.

THREATENS TO SHOOT

The bandit forced Robert Marks, assistant manager; Robert Guiney, credit manager, and William A. Natale to hold up their hands while he rifled the safe and cash drawer.

Then he turned to the manager, Alfred Bertille, and snarled:

"If you don't give me everything that's here, I'll give it to you. This is the last time."

Then, backing away as he waved his guns at the five men, the robber bolted through the door and dashed for Bechard's car. He drove it only two blocks, abandoning it at First and B streets.

Natale, a victim of the previous holdup, recognized the bandit as one of two men who robbed the brewery office less than two months ago.

BANDIT DESCRIBED

On that occasion the pair entered the office at closing time. After looting the safe, they forced Natale and another employe to accompany them to their car, parked a short distance away.

Then they jumped in the machine, leaving the employes standing in the street.

Fingerprint experts were on the scene a short time after today's holdup, hopeful of obtaining a clue to the robber's identity.

He was described as about 30, six feet tall, wearing a dark gray suit and a herringbone overcoat.

Japs Train Their Guns On French

BULLETIN

LONDON, Jan. 8 (INS)—With the Shanghai situation viewed as "very grave," Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain is arranging for a special ministerial council next week, it was learned today. Beating of two British policemen by Japs and other incidents necessitate prompt action by Britain, it was stated.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 8 (INS)—Wild scenes in which Japanese troops trained machine guns on foreigners and French police similarly menaced Nipponese soldiers brought new perils to Shanghai today and threatened grave international repercussions.

Led by an American, Shanghai's council, governing the International Settlement, came into sharp conflict today with Nipponese authorities.

Cornell E. S. Franklin, American chairman, lodged a strong protest with Japanese Consul General Okamoto regarding the attack by Japanese soldiers on two British members of the settlement police.

One dangerous incident followed another in bewildering fashion after the new crisis was precipitated by a fight between Japanese soldiers and a Russian volunteer who had threatened a trooper with a revolver.

Almost at the same moment that all this was going on, Japanese marines suddenly occupied the British owned new Asia Hotel in the International Settlement north of Soochow Creek.

HAUL DOWN FLAGS

The Nipponese marines hauled down two British flags and hoisted Japanese banners.

British and French officials were expected to launch protests against

Body Found With Will, Bank Book

With bankbooks showing deposits of $7000 in his possession the body of William Kelleher, 63, was found today in an almost bare attic in Cooper street, North End, around which property he had been an odd job man for several years.

The body was found by police following a report that he had not been seen at his usual haunts since Sept. 25.

WILL NEAR BODY

Acting Medical Examiner Cornelius O'Leary stated in a preliminary finding that death was probably due to natural causes and ordered the body to the Southern Mortuary for an autopsy.

In the attic was a will, dated July 11, 1937, that bequeathed most of his estate to sisters and brothers in Ireland, gave $500 to a Mrs. Mary Quill in Brighton, a niece of one of his friends, and made provision for burial.

A letter from relatives in Ireland was also found.

Investigation among relatives and friends revealed that he had amassed his money by self denial over many years.

In the attic room were only a bed, a chair and a bureau. The remainder of the house was vacant.

Kelleher was a native of County Cork, Ireland, and has been in this country about 40 years, it was learned by police.

He visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Denehy in Belmont street, Cambridge. Mr. Denehy had been a boyhood friend in Ireland and they continued their friendship when both came here.

Mrs. Quill is a niece of Mr. Denehy.

It is believed that Kelleher has three sisters and two brothers in Ireland.

Lost Town $58,000 In Race Bets

LAWRENCE, Jan. 8 (AP)—District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg announced today he had obtained a confession from Walter R. Shute, 33, Salisbury town treasurer accused of larceny of $25,000, that he lost approximately $58,000 in town funds gambling on horse races.

Cregg said Shute, father of two young children, told him he began "speculating" on horse races with the town's funds last July, and since that date had visited every race track in the country.

SAYS TIDE TURNED

According to the confession announced by Cregg, Shute started gambling with $4700 of his own money and for a time enjoyed beginner's luck, winning large sums.

Then the tide turned and he found himself $20,000 "in the hole" and began drawing on the money entrusted to him.

Cregg said Shute told him he frequently bet $5000 on a race and that he lost $50,000 "in three race track transactions."

Shute, arrested Thursday, was ordered held in $10,000 bail pending grand jury action.

BONDED FOR $38,400

He expressed a wish, the district attorney said, to obtain his liberty under bond, declaring he had influential friends he hoped would assist him in making restitution.

Shute blamed no one but himself, Cregg said. He was bonded for $38,400 and has tendered his resignation.

Save 3 Children In Waltham Fire

Three children were carried to safety as a two-alarm fire caused $3000 damage today to an Adams street, Waltham, duplex dwelling.

Awakened by smoke, John F. Carroll, Jr., led his wife to safety down a back stairway.

In the other half of the house Carroll then awakened Mr. and Mrs. Eric Nisbet and their three children, William, 4, Ronald 2, and John, 2 months.

Mr. and Mrs. Nisbet and Carroll each carried one child to the street. Carroll's dog followed his master to safety.

40 Driven Out, 1 Hurt At Blaze in Cambridge

John Yates, 48, suffered burns and 40 persons were driven to the street by a fire on the third floor of a five-story apartment house in Coggswell avenue, Cambridge, early today.

According to police he was burned while attempting to beat out the flames that started in his apartment.

Fin. Com. in Report Assails Ex-Mayor

Former Mayor Mansfield's regime in City Hall was the target of two attacks today, one by Mayor Tobin and the other by the Fin. Com.

Mayor Tobin's economy axe lopped off the heads of 10 city employes alleged beneficiaries of "payroll padding" by the former administration.

The Fin. Com., in a lengthy report to Mayor Tobin, charged "looseness and lavishness" in the award of contracts in connection with WPA projects at the City Hospital and asked an investigation of alleged "thousands of dollars waste."

Huge 'Waste' Is Alleged

Charges of wasting hundreds of thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money through "looseness and lavishness" in the award of contracts were leveled today at the Mansfield administration by the Boston Finance Commission.

In a scathing denunciation of procedure allegedly employed in 1936 and 1937, the commission asked Mayor Maurice J. Tobin to take steps "to root out practices which are, unwarrantedly, not only costly to the taxpayers, but permit fraudulent collection of taxpayers' money."

CITE HOSPITAL RENTAL

The Boston City Hospital project, under Works Progress Administration sponsorship, came in for particular criticism. The report alleged that $62,640.75 was paid over a period of two years for the rental of equipment that could have been purchased for $16,000.

Tobin's Axe Slashes Ten

Payroll padding was charged against former Mayor Mansfield today as Mayor Maurice J. Tobin's economy axe lopped off 10 employes in the municipal employment bureau.

Firing was ordered by Stephen Hughes, newly appointed director of the bureau, when he found his department "overmanned with far more employes than under any previous administration."

"The employes were discharged in conformity with Mayor Tobin's economy plan," Hughes said. "There was not the slightest need for so large a department and I assume full responsibility for the discharges."

WOMAN TO GET JOB

The list of ten included many appointed by Mayor Mansfield, but one of those discharged, Miss Katherine Kenefick, of Pearl street, Charlestown, had been in the bureau since August 31, 1928.

Asked concerning her dismissal, Hughes stated it was a mistake.

"Mayor Tobin already has heard

Senate Told U. S. Aid Must Continue

Shorter Work Week Urged by Lynn's Mayor, Fuchs; WPA Is Favored

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP)—Eleven New Englanders, representing various industrial and civic interests, expressed ther views on unemployment in an analysis of nation-wide opinion on the problem made public today by the special Senate committee on unemployment relief.

Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn, Mass., proposed shortening hours of employment by law to 35 hours a week "with proper supervision as to a minimum wage so as to main adequately the present standard of living and avoid unfair competition between the same form of business in the various states."

Emil Fuchs of the Massachusetts Unemployment Compensation Commission favored a five-day week "on the theory it will embrace the further opportunity to place a great many people who are still out of employment."

'GOVERNMENT MUST AID'

J. R. Boyson, corresponding secretary of the Christian Science Monitor, Boston, told the committee:

"In adverse times the federal government must stand prepared to assist, and this probably can be done through a federal grants-in-aid system similar to that used for highway construction or old age pensions."

Joseph A. Parks, chairman of the Massachusetts department of industrial accidents, Boston, scored:

"A tendency on the employers' part when a workman has been injured and receiving compensation to refuse to give him employment when he is ready to work . . . Also a tendency on the workman's part to want to continue receiving compensation after he is well."

GOV. AIKEN'S VIEWS

Governor George E. Aiken of Vermont asserted:

"We are still of the opinion that grant-in-aid to be matched by state community will provide relief for the least expense, but we realize that certain regions needing the most relief are perhaps the least able to match federal funds."

E. F. Crane, editor, Burlington, Vt., Free Press, declared:

"Government must either trust industry and give it more support in working out the unemployment problem, or take the full responsibility for it, which means complete regimentation of industry as in Italy and Germany today. No halfway measures will solve the problem."

James M. Langley, publisher of the Concord, N. H., Monitor, said:

"High costs are the principal cause of the development of labor-saving devices," and added that "these policies of the government which tend artificially to maintain a high price level, and many of the 'New Deal' policies as expressed in legislation, do this, encourage greater efficiency in machinery production and cause disturbances in employment resulting in unemployemnt."

WOULD CONTINUE WPA

Mayor Thomas P. McCoy, Pawtucket, R. I., suggested:

"The federal government ought to continue to administer the WPA from Washington because of the coordination, uniformity and responsibility that has been brought about by this federal control . . I further suggest establishment of a municipal bureau under the WPA to provide a limited direct contact between the WPA and municipalities, thus safeguarding against misinterpretation and unsympathetic state administrations."

Harry C. Knight, president, Southern New England Telephone Co., New Haven, Conn., said he felt:

"The introduction of labor-saving devices frequently bears very hard on individuals who find the craft in which they have skilled themselves over a long period becoming suddenly non-existent, and I further think this specific problem presents a direct and definite challenge to the industries involved."

PRAISES YOUTH MOVEMENT

William F. Ryan, superintendent, Hartford, Conn., department of public welfare, said:

"The National Youth Administration has done excellent work on youths between 18 and 25, but boys and girls, 16 to 18, are left uncared for. Many employers find our youth unprepared for business at the conclusion of secondary school education. If the NYA would admit youths of 16 the problem would be temporarily solved."

W. J. Wilcox, secretary, Employers' Association, Meriden, Ct., asserted that in some cases "the WPA wage per hour is set so high there is no real incentive for the men to leave the WPA and go into private employment."

100 Business Leaders Polled About Recovery

By EDWARD GOTTLIEB

(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—One hundred key American industrialist are being secretly polled for up-to-the-minute facts and views on the business recession, unemployment and the outlook for recovery, it was learned today.

Simultaneously, reports from two giant industries showed upward spurts in employment and buying. Steel mills in the East and Mid-West put 70,000 men back to work, and railroad buying reached unanticipated strength.

REPORT IN 10 DAYS

These reports, plus the confident prediction by Wiliam S. Knudsen, General Motors Corporation president, that the recession will be ended in the spring added emphasis to the need for up-to-date opinions from the nation's top-flight business men.

The composite picture resulting from the secret survey—regarded by both business and the Roosevelt administration as probably the most important development in their struggle to beat the slump—will be revealed in Washingtno within ten days.

An eminent spokesman and internationally known business executive, long an ardent pleader for cooperation with labor and government, is preparing the poll with the aid of his private staff in New York.

He has been invited to present the collected data personally before the Byrnes Senate Unemployment and Relief Committee, but in disclosing the extent of his testimony the executive asked that his identity be withheld for the present.

EMPLOY MILLIONS

The 100 industrialists, it was disclosed, represent the nation's major mass industries with plants and offices in nearly every large city in the United States.

It was estimated that these industries, controlled, in effect, by "the 100", have an employment potentiality of millions of men and women, or enough to swing the pendulum of recession to the heights of business prosperity—should their plants be tuned to capacity output.

The man who will take the Washington spotlight for business, either next Friday or a week from Monday, is a ranking officer of the National Association of Manufacturers, it can be said.

As a representative of that powerful group, his entrance into the picture symbolizes a forward step being taken on the part of business in cooperation with President Roosevelt and his administration, despite attacks by several New Deal spokesmen.

From all indications in authoritative circles it seems certain that a White House invitation for "a get together" round table discusion with President Roosevelt would be promptly accepted by big business.

Biggers Shows Errors In Part-Time Job Data

By FREDERICK N. POLANGIN

International News Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan 8—Admitting impossibility of an accurate survey, John D. Biggers, unemployment census director, told President Roosevelt today that in mid-November there were between 3,209,211 and 5,630,000 persons partly employed and wanting more work.

Previously, Biggers disclosed in his first report on the jobless census that there were between 7,800,000 and 10,800,000 totally unemployed at that time.

An analysis of partial employment, Biggers told the President, was most difficult because of many variable and changing factors. He asserted:

"Preliminary analysis indicates that a very considerable number have registered or reported themselves as partly unemployed when they clearly belong to the group of partly employed workers and should not have included themselves in either the voluntary or test census.

"The voluntary census taken in mid-November showed 2,641,630 males and 567,551 females partly employed, while a test tally over 1455 postal routes showed only 57 per cent of the number reported. For total unemployment, only 72 per cent responded in the test canvass."

FIGURES CHANGE AGAIN

Since the tally was taken in November, however, the picture has changed. For example, 205,000 workers for General Motors Corporation have recently been placed on a 24-hour week while $30,000 others have been laid off.

Unemployment figures, total and part time, must be brought up to date, Biggers pointed up.

Dear Sir:

Kindly accept my sincere thanks for your assistance to this Commission during the past few months.

Your newspaper was a definite aid in our handling of the initial registration of some 100,000 jobless applicants during the first few days of this past week.

The knowledge which many of these applicants possessed about the Unemployment Compensation Law was amazing and I can truthfully report that this was in no small measure due to the assistance offered by your newspaper. Such a cooperative attitude will undoubtedly be of invaluable aid in our endeavor to properly administer the Unemployment Compensation Law.

I assure you that your cooperation has been appreciated.

Very truly yours,

G. O. P. to Study Nation's Ills

CHICAGO, Jan 8 (INS)—The Republican party, in battling for ascendancy, today launched one of the strangest programs of strategy in the annals of American politics.

In a move unique in the field of political maneuvering, the G. O. P. has set up a "non political" organization to study, from a scientific viewpoint, the social and economic difficulties confronting the nation.

Meanwhile, conflict between warring forces in the Republican party was sharpened when Alf M. Landon and Colonel Frank Knox bluntly rejected invitations from National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton to serve as honorary chairmen and members of the policy committee of 100.

Southern Wage and Hour Bill Foes Draft Own Act

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (AP)—Some southern representatives who played a major part in sidetracking the administration's wage-hour bill at the special session of Congress disclosed today they were drafting a labor standards bill of their own.

Rep. McReynolds (D.), Tennessee, said the measure might provide a system under which a majority of operators in any one industry would be empowered to determine whether their standards needed federal regulation.

Proponents of wage-hour legislation also hailed as encouraging the action of the southeastern governors' conference in endorsing the principle of legislation intended, in President Roosevelt's words of last Monday, to "end starvation wages and intolerable hours."

Friends of the legislation said they saw another indication that southern opposition was dwindling in the victory of Representative Lister Hill over ex-Senator Thomas Heflin in Alabama. Hill, seeking the Democratic nomination for the Senate post formerly held by Justice Hugo L. Black, advocated wage and hour regulation.

All Eager to Do Their Part In Speeding Recovery

This is the fifth in a series of articles on news developments of vital interest and importance to New England employers and employes and to all residents generally of Massachusetts and the other five northeastern states.

By FREDERICK A. SMITH

Massachusetts business and industrial leaders assured the Boston Evening American today they are ready to go to Washington and offer complete co-operation to President Roosevelt in ending the recession.

WILLING TO AID

The President has disclosed that he has in mind a series of conferences with business leaders on how to eliminate overproduction.

The principal topic at these conferences, the President indicated, will be the problem of ridding business of what some White House spokesmen have called "evil" practices, such as high pressure salesmanship.

While leaders interviewed by the American disagreed with the theory that high pressure selling methods are responsible for building up surplus stocks they were unanimous in expressing a desire to help remedy present conditions.

One leader said all Washington needs to do is invite them there and they will come. But he added:

"We don't want to go there and have to sit on the White House steps until we're asked inside."

At the offices of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts the following statement was made with reference to the "high-pressure" theory:

NO HIGH PRESSURE

"Associated Industries subscribes to the statement expressed in New York by Wendell L. Willkie in which he said: 'I suggest that we have now reached the time when we should stop discussing who caused the repression and should direct our attention to a discussion of how to cure it.'

"By and large the industries of this state will be glad to go to Washington when called, and submit their views on the matter."

Willkie, president of the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation, recently visited the White House and discussed public utility conditions with President Roosevelt.

Business men here expressed agreement also with the statement of William B. Warner, president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"Manufacturers are ready and anxious to co-operate with Congress, the administration and with other groups in clearing away obstacles leading to the recession with its mounting toll of unemployment. Already many business men have accepted the invitation of Chairman Byrnes of the special Senate committee to counsel with it on unemployment and relief."

Disagreement with the assertion that high pressure salesmanship had contributed to the recession was also voiced by William M. Rand, president of the Merrimack Chemical Company, Everett.

He said:

"I believe that it is making a false assumption to attribute to high pressure sales the present market difficultes. High pressure salesmanship and capacity production do not check. I would be glad to go to Washington and give Mr. Roosevelt my views on the situation."

1000 to Pay $100 Each to Hear Roosevelt

Jackson Dinner Aimed At Deficit; Business Is to Listen In

By GEORGE DURNO

International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—To the dizzy tune of $100 a plate, approximately 1000 super-loyal New Dealers will assemble in one of Washington's leading hotels tonight to pay homage to that Democratic patron saint, Andrew Jackson—and listen to President Roosevelt's latest discussion of the forces he believes lie behind the current business recession.

Mr. Roosevelt's speech will be broadcast about 9:30 p. m. E. S. T., after Postmaster General James A. Farley makes introductory remarks from a New York dinner, where more than 1200 are expected at $50 a plate. Their words will reach thousands of other diners in smaller cities, who will pay from $5 to $10 a plate, and to millions who will just stay at home.

AIMED AT DEFICIT

Tonight's Jackson Day dinner is distinctly political, as Jim Farley hopes to raise from $200,000 to $250,000 on his dinners to wipe out the Democratic party's $211,295 deficit, but business leaders were waiting Mr. Roosevelt's address with as much interest as they did his annual message to Congress last Monday.

Those closest to the President predicted he would key this speech to the rugged philosophy that "Old Hickory" expounded in 1829-37 when the latter won support from farmers and labor as against the wealthiest groups.

20-MINUTE TALK

Mr. Roosevelt, in 20 minutes of talk, it was understood, would undertake further to clarify his position on corporate taxation, hours and wages, crop control and increased purchasing power.

The very big corporations may come in for further criticism. President Roosevelt, according to his aides, has been trying for several week to build a picture of the country's 200,000 corporations, of which only a few hundred control 65 per cent of the nation's output. He is hammering on the idea that this group on top and a small group of "sweatshop chiselers" at the bottom are "squeezing" the bulk of American business enterprise lying in the middle.

Buses Extend Rush Hour Trips

Buses operating between Rowes Wharf and Commonwealth Pier and Fish Pier will extend their trips to State street during rush hours, starting today, announced Edward Dana, president and general manager of the Boston Elevated Railway.

The extension of service from State street will be made on week-days between 5:45 and 10 a. m. and between 3 and 6:30 p. m. On Saturdays, the extended service will be operated in the same morning rush hours and from 12 o'clock noon until 3 p. m.

Gen. Johnson Says:

'Little Man' Keen On Deal's Moves

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

CHICAGO, Jan. 8—I talked to about 1000 furniture men in Chicago the other night. They came from all parts of the Union. They included some big wholesalers, but by far the bulk of them are retailers—the "little fellow in business" of purest ray serene.

The principal act of this kind of a show is for the speaker to assume the role of African dodger at a county fair and undertake to try to answer questions about business and government—or to say he doesn't know.

I think it is the best gauge of group opinion that could possibly be devised. You can go to a town and call on five or six big shots and ask them how conditions are and what people are thinking.

What you usually get are five or six dissertations on five or six individual hobbies, peeves or enthusiasms in thinking. Or you can ask cab drivers or Pullman porters and other casual pick-ups or listen to state-of-the-Union conferences in Pullman smokers, clubs and cocktail bars.

HUGH S. JOHNSON

These are good but fragmentary. Also, in all these cases where you ask the other fellow the question, you put him in a miniature spotlight. More or less he has to dramatize himself and speak his little piece. This doesn't always make for frankness.

But when you get a cross-section of the whole country, in a particular trade or calling, into a room and let them ask spontaneous questions without either rising or telling their names, you can tell far better from their questions in an hour what is troubling their souls, than from all the interviews with them you could crowd into a week.

This is emphasized by the inbred American trait of wanting to talk back if the answer isn't right, and also by the reaction of the crowd to both questions and answers.

It is an educational experience and the best indoor sport I know.

* * *

Well, so what about this congress of little fellows?

In the first place, in three years of doing this occasionally and in 44 states, I have never seen the interest in what is going on in Washington so intense. Why wouldn't it be? These people clearly believe that their fortunes and their livelihoods now depend on that more directly than on any other thing.

Next, their knowledge of the principal issues is astonishing—much better than that of some Congressmen I know. They lap up every bit of news and comment that comes through the newspapers or over the air. Whatever harm the Third New Deal has done to other businesses, it certainly has put this column racket on the map.

The important and incontestable conclusion to me was that this crowd doesn't want any part of the Third New Deal in its recent aspects.

If the strategy of centering attacks only on big business or only on a few bad business men, was intended to retain and reassure the support of the little fellow, it hasn't worked so far as this trade is concerned.

* * *

The feeling is not merely adverse and apprehensive, it is hostile and bitter. That may be a little exaggerated just now because business is very bad, but it was too vivid and too nearly unanimous to leave any doubt that it is a conviction. In about 100 questions covering a range of nearly as many subjects—from war to agriculture—there was only one that indicated the slightest sympathy with recent developments of Administration policy.

The outstanding impression of all was that of skepticism, suspicion or outright scoffing at the sincerity of Administration pronouncements.

That is a result of being over and over again—and nearly always in an emergency—clever, clever, too clever.

Auto Workers Headed Back

DETROIT, Jan. 8 (AP)—A back-to-work trend in the automobile industry was under way today after holiday layoffs.

The Chrysler Corp. announced last night that the 55,000 persons who were working in its plants at the time of the curtailment, Dec. 23, will return Tuesday.

The Hudson Motor Car Co. said that it would "put money and men back to work" in announcing the expenditure of $11,000,000 for materials and equipment to begin immediate production of a new car in the low-priced field.

It said it would increase its workers from 6000 to 12,000 within the next few weeks.

The Ford Motor Co. said that less than 25,000 of the 87,000 workers at its mammoth Rouge plant in Dearborn are idle now, and that it "hopes" to have all of them back around January 17.

General Motors Corp. has not revealed when it will recall the 30,000 employes laid off because of "the recession in business."

Andover Woman, Hit by Auto, Dying

ANDOVER, Jan. 8 — Elizabeth O'Connell, 45, of School street, Andover, is dying at the Lawrence Memorial Hospital of injuries sustained when she was struck by an automobile while walking along Central street, near School street, in Andover.

The automobile which struck Miss O'Connell was operated by George H. Musk, 35, of High street, Andover, police say. He stated he did not see Miss O'Connell until he was within a few feet of her and that the condition of the street prevented his stopping before hitting her, police declared.

Press Anti-Lynch Bill Filibuster

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—The filibuster against the anti-lynching bill continued in the Senate today after Senator William E. Borah of Idaho joined southern senators in their battle against the measure, challenging the government to prove it could handle the problem better than the states.

The authority which the bill proposes to place in the hands of the federal government, robs the states of their constitutional rights, Borah charged.

"If you can send a United States marshal into Tennessee to arrest a sheriff because he failed to prevent a lynching," the Idaho veteran thundered, "by the same token you can send a federal officer into New York to arrest a policeman who failed to prevent a murder."

DuPont, Lewis Job Views Next

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—A new parade of business and labor chiefs will appear next week before the special Senate committee seeking a remedy to the present recession and its rising toll of unemployed.

This new group will be led by Lammot duPont, chairman of the E. I. duPont De Nemours Company.

Others will include John L. Lewis, CIO chieftain; Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, son of the former President; Benjamin Fairless, president of the U. S. Steel Corporation, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Immediate action by the Administration, including a gigantic spending program, has been demanded by the leaders who already have expressed their views on how recovery can be speeded.

By WALTER KIERNAN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 8—Long speculation as to who will receive the $25,000 Lindbergh reward will be set at rest on Monday afternoon when Governor Harold Hoffman will announce his decision, he said today.

GOVERNOR HOFFMAN

BRUNO HAUPTMANN

The problem has been before him for many months, but with the end of his term less than two weeks away he was reported earlier in the week preparing his announcement.

Principal claimants for the reward are Walter V. Lyle and John L. Lyons, gas station attendants who accepted one of the Lindbergh ransom bills, noted the customer's registration and so turned the investigation to Hauptmann when the bill was identified.

Others with claims are William E. Strong, the bank teller who identified the bill as one in the $50,000 which Dr. John F. Condon threw over a cemetery wall to the supposed kidnaper; William F. Cody, bank teller who turned up another of the ransom notes; William J. Allen, the Trenton trucker who found the body of the Lindbergh baby, and Joseph A. Perrone and Charles Rossiter who were identification witnesses.

CURTIS PLEA DENIED

In voting the $25,000 reward money, the legislature left its disposition entirely up to the governor and he has given the various claims much consideration.

While he gave no hint today as to how he will award it, belief was that Lyle and Lyons were the favored claimants.

The "inside story of the Hauptmann case" from the pen of Hoffman, the man who faced political death to stay the execution of the German carpenter, may soon be told.

Governor Hoffman was reported busy with two matters today—one, the completion of articles he is preparing for several magazines; the other, a statement to accompany his decision on the reward.

Another angle of the Lindbergh case held his attention earlier this week—an application of John Hughes Curtis to erase his conviction for impeding justice. Curtis, Norfolk, Va., boat-builder, claimed contact with the kidnapers shortly after the crime, led Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh on a futile chase. His story termed false, he was fined $1000 and given a suspended prison term of one year. The board of pardons, with the governor presiding, rejected the application which would have erased the stigma of conviction.

HOFFMAN DEFIED ALL

While his office would not say definitely that the unfinished "articles" concerned his role in the Hauptmann case, the assumption was that "several magazines" probably would be more interested in that phase of his administration than in any other.

If there is an "inside" to the Hauptmann case, Governor Hoffman can tell it, for he visited Hauptmann in his cell secretly at night, talked with him as man to man and came away convinced that the mere act of throwing a switch, sending the high voltage "juice" through Hauptmann's body would not serve as answer to the Lindbergh kidnap-murder.

Held After Using J. P. Morgan's Name

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (INS)—Stewart B. Sayres, 33, of Orange, N. J., was due in felony court today after ordering $111 worth of whiskey in the name of J. P. Morgan and accepting delivery at the Tebo yacht basin when Morgan's yacht Corsair is docked. He represented himself as Morgan's steward.

Tobin, Jr., in Camera Debut

Hub's New 'First' Family' Member 'Poses'

CAROL ANN MRS. TOBIN MAURICE, JR. HELEN LOUISE

Mother of Film Star in Suit

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8 (INS)—A Hollywood marriage that took place Christmas Eve ran into trouble today.

Principals were Mrs. Ann Beresford Whitehead, youthful mother of Anita Louise, film star; Verne Whitehead, her husband, well known orchestra leader, and Mrs. Bernice Whitehead, former wife of the bandsman.

The ex-wife of Whitehead filed a $150,000 alienation of affections suit against the present Mrs. Whitehead, alleging the film star's mother lured Whitehead away from her.

Whitehead and his first wife were married November 1, 1935, and divorced December 2, 1937.

Piracy by Mrs. Beresford of Whitehead's love was done "maliciously," and Whitehead was "induced" by Mrs. Beresford, a "woman of great wealth," to leave his wife, according to the suit.

Mrs. Beresford and Whitehead were married here December 24 in Miss Louise's sumptuous home at a quiet ceremony.

Night Club Where Rudy Got His Start Is Closed

NEW YORK, Jan. 8 (AP)—Broadway suffered its second night club fatality of the season today in the closing of the Hollywood Restaurant, first of the lavish floor show cabarets.

The pioneer Hollywood, like the French Casino, another tinsel center that closed Nov. 22, was a victim of low financial pressure from the butter-and-egg trade. The Casino is planning to reopen soon.

Owners of the Hollywood filed a bankruptcy petition Dec. 28, listing liabilities of $260,000. In the petition they said last year had been "the most disastrous ever suffered" by the night club industry. The restaurant employed 150 persons.

It was from the Hollywood that Rudy Vallee went on to radio and screen fame. There in 1928, after a brief appearance in an obscure night spot, the 26-year-old Yale graduate introduced his crooning to Broadway audiences of the prohibition era. Within a year he was a national radio figure and soon after went into the movies.

South Swept By Cold Wave

Sub-freezing weather spread over most of the South today moving in from the Great Lakes region. Lower temperatures generally were forecast for tonight.

The cold wave extended as far south as Pensacola, Fla., Shreveport, La., and Dallas, Texas. Snow fell in Montana and North Dakota. Some sections of the East escaped the freezing weather but it was 2 below at Morehead, Minn.

Snow flurries were expected in Northwest Virginia. Heavy frost and temperatures of 26 to 32 were forecast for Northern Florida.

Chicagoans scurried about with tingling ears in the city's first zero weather in nearly two years.

When the mercury dropped to zero at 8:15 a. m. it was the first time it had gone that low there since February 19, 1936.

Yale Boy's Death Climaxes Lasell School Prank

Two Others Hurt on Way to Newton for Escapade Trial

Death and serious injury today brought to a tragic climax the escapade of three Yale students who last November caused consternation by a nocturnal prowl through Lasell Junior College, exclusive Auburndale girls' school.

Driving to Newton for arraignment in district court for that adventure, they plunged in a car into Hockanum river in Manchester, Ct. One youth was killed and the others were injured.

ONE SERIOUSLY HURT

Less seriously hurt, but detained in the hospital, are William C. Putnam, 19, of Carthage, Mo., and John Shevlin of 339 Clark road, Brookline. Shevlin was not involved in the Lasell affair, but was accompanying the others for a week-end visit with his family.

The car skidded on an icy pavement, struck a sign post on a sharp curve and went into the river, landing on its side. Passing motorists went to the assistance of the occupants and two ambulances took them to the hospital.

FACED CHARGES

Wilson, Humphrey and Putnam were scheduled to face charges of drunkenness and trespassing in Newton district court today.

The students, all members of prominent families, were arrested in the Lasell dormitory after girls at the college had pelted them with riding boots, books, ink bottles and paperweights.

They went there, police said they admitted, in quest of a "date," seeking a girl whom college authorities said had left the school a year ago.

Mrs. Culbertson Ill in Reno

RENO, Nev., Jan. 8 (INS)—Mrs. Josephine Culbertson, the internationally known bridge expert, here to divorce her famous husband, Ely Culbertson, was recuperating today from an illness which has kept her in seclusion for nearly all of the three weeks she has been here.

"I haven't even looked at a pack of cards, let alone play bridge since I've been here," she said. "In the last few days I have been taking long walks by myself to get my strength back."

Mrs. Culbertson said she had been approached by bridge fans here to sponsor a bridge club in Reno, membership in which would be open to those who come here to seek divorce, but that she refused to entertain the idea.

Choir-Singer Killer Forgiven

DOROTHY SCHAEFFER

Sorry Patricide

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Jan. 8—Calm and wide-eyed, Dorothy Schaeffer, 18-year-old choir singer, sat in the Hudson county jail today, accused of the murder of her father.

Dorothy was "forgiven" today by her mother and offered spiritual aid by the clergyman of the church in which she was a choir singer.

The Rev. [illegible] H. [illegible], pastor of All Saints [illegible] Evangelical Lutheran Church, made several fruitless efforts to convey to her the words of her mother, Mrs. Adeline Schaeffer:

"Tell Dorothy I have forgiven her for what she has done."

Officials would not permit him to visit the girl.

The girl occupied a cell in the same tier in which recently sat Gladys McKnight, the "tomboy" who killed her mother with an axe.

Police related that Dorothy said [illegible] her father came home [illegible] and quarreled. He [illegible] the knife until neighbors threatened to call the police when he shouted:

"To hell with them and to hell with the police! Come to think of it, you're a pretty fresh kid. You haven't had a beating in a long time."

Her father then threatened to beat her and her mother, she said, and when he rushed at her she stabbed him.

Kennedy Faces 3 Tasks, Says Fitzgerald

War Debts, Currency And Trade Will Get Attention

If Joseph P. Kennedy, his son-in-law, thinks he should go to England as United States ambassador, instead of refusing the appointment by President Roosevelt, as many persons, including friends, have suggested, then it is the right thing to do beyond doubt, said John F. Fitzgerald, former Boston mayor today.

The famous political leader was all smiles over the naming of Kennedy and prognosticating a brilliant future for him as an international diplomat.

THREE MAIN JOBS

"I know a lot of people say he should stay over here—that he's needed more in this country. But he's a very smart man, and if he thinks that it is right for him to go to England, then I know it is right for him to do so.

"He's got three main jobs to consider, jobs which are usually considered by the Congress and by Parliament, and which will now be handled almost entirely by him and Secretary Hull.

SONS IN HARVARD

"These are the war debts, the stabilization of currency and the administration of trade agreements. If he succeeds in these three things, there is no doubt he will be the most important man in the country. I look for great things from him."

He stated that he believed the Kennedys would not leave for their new post until April.

Fitzgerald said he and Mrs. Fitzgerald will probably go to England to see the Kennedys, but that he did not know just when that would be.

Ambassador Kennedy To Open Boston Drive

The United States ambassador to the Court of St. James will open the Greater Boston 1938 Community Fund campaign.

Though he is one of America's busiest men and is trying to clean up his Maritime Commission affairs as he "crams" knowledge of an ambassador's duties, Joseph P. Kennedy will keep his promise to the committee.

The Boston-born Roosevelt administration "trouble shooter" will speak when the campaign starts at 8 p. m. January 24 in Mechanics hall. Assurance of that has been given by a member of his staff.

When he received the message, Leverett Saltonstall, general chairman of the fund campaign, wired:

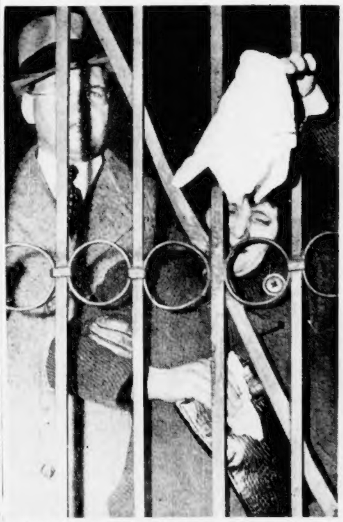
"Congratulations on your appointment as Ambassador to the Court of St. James. We are certainly pleased it will be possible for you to come to Boston to open the 1938 campaign."

'Connie' Bennett Raps Portrait

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 8—A "purported resemblance" is what Constance Bennett calls a portrait by Willy Pogany. She gave the description in filing answer to his $3500 suit for payment.

Miss Bennett states Pogany insisted on her receiving the portrait, although it did not look like her. She also claims he refused to change it on the ground it would damage his reputation, and is positive she agreed to pay him only $500, not $3500.

Mother's Heartbreak



A frantic plea to see her daughter vainly is being made here by Mrs. Edward L. Owens, at jail in Newark, N. J. Genevieve Owens, 17, was being held from other prisoners and from kin as police gathered evidence to be used against her and Mrs. Ethel Strouse Sohl, in bus holdup and murder of driver.

'Rock-a-Bye Baby' Composer, Near 70, Alone but Happy

Mrs. Carlton, Living In Boston, Recalls Early Triumph

By MARY X. SULLIVAN

"Rock-a-bye baby, on the tree-top,
"When the wind blows, the cradle will rock—"

For 50 years, mothers have crooned this lullaby to their babies at bedtime. Although it is more familiar to Americans than any other song, few of them know where it originated, nor have they ever heard of Effie I. Canning Carlton, its author and composer.

The Boston Evening American today located Mrs. Carlton, living quietly in St. Botolph street in Boston. Alone in the world, she has been there for many years, eking out a living from the royalties which still come in from her song.

Effie Carlton, now nearing 70, never had a baby of her own to rock. She has always loved them, and has consoled herself with the thought that her melody is a part of the babyhood of a whole generation.

REMINISCENT SMILE

As she told the story of how she came to write the lullaby, her face dimpled with a smile of reminiscence.

"It was really an accident," she said. "I was sitting on the porch of our summer home at Ocean Spray, now Winthrop, one summer afternoon in 1876. A guest asked me to keep an eye on her baby boy, beside me in a hammock. When he began to squirm around I rocked the hammock gently, and the words of the Mother Goose rhyme, from which the first part of the song is taken, came into my mind.

"As I pushed, I recited the words, and suddenly they seemed to sing themselves. "You know, I just couldn't get that tune out of my head. Then one day on a train I took out a pencil and a piece of paper and wrote the three verses. The first thing I knew the song was famous."

DAUGHTER OF DOCTOR

At that time she was Effie Crockett, daughter of a Boston physician, Dr. William Edward Crockett. Her great-grandfather and the father of Davy Crockett, of Alamo fame, were brothers.

"Nobody knows me now," she said cheerfully. "But my goodness, what a fuss they made about me in those days! Everywhere I appeared, the band broke into 'Rock-a-Bye Baby.'"

Soon after her song met with success, her family allowed her to go on the stage. And she took the name of Canning. In a company with Mrs. Leslie Carter, she fell in love with a young actor, Harry Carlton and married him. And though they never had the joy of singing "Rock-a-Bye Baby" to a child of their own, they were very happy up to the time of his death in 1922.

NEVER WANED

The popularity of "Rock-a-bye Baby" has never waned.

"Even today I hear it," said Mrs. Carlton. "Organ-grinders play it under my window in spring; when I walk through the parks I hear mothers singing it to their babies. And last week I went to a movie, and there was Minnie Mouse, rocking her little niece to sleep with my song!"

Current interest in Mrs. Carlton was aroused when United States Congressman Connery of Massachusetts asked for a bill to grant her the renewal of the copyright, which through error had not been properly filed.

Few on WPA Get Jobless Aid

Although WPA workers must leave WPA roles this month to collect unemployment compensation checks, a New England survey disclosed today the number of WPA workers who have performed enough private work to qualify for jobless benefits are few.

To register for benefits in Massachusetts a worker must be totally unemployed, so those performing WPA work are not eligible.

At the same time, most of those now on the roles have not had private employment the last year.

Those seeking unemployment benefits in New England probably will reach 300,000, officials declare. Already, 275,000 persons have registered, 20,000 of them in Boston.

Only 20,000,000 Miles From Eros!

The earth late this month will be only 20,000,000 miles from the asteroid Eros, it was reported today at the Harvard observatory.

The asteroid will make its closest swing to the earth in many years about January 20, although it approached within 14,000,000 miles in 1898. Last October an unidentified asteroid came within 1,000,000 miles of the earth and stayed for five days.

Mrs. Rubens Free From Soviet Jail, Report

Rumor Says She's On Way Home; Case Near Solution

MOSCOW, Jan. 8 (INS)—The celebrated "Robinson"-Rubens spy mystery neared solution today amid rumors that Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens already had been secretly released from a Soviet prison and deported.

The rumors, denied in official circles, sprang up after the United States in a formal note demanded to know whether American-born Mrs. Rubens was under arrest and, if so, where and on what charges.

Conflicting reports concerning the fate of the New York woman and her husband, Adolph Arnold Rubens, were rife in Moscow's foreign colony as the whole intriguing episode approached a climax. One was to the effect that Mrs. Rubens had already been executed with Rubens on espionage charges.

SECRETLY FREED

In some American circles here it was believed possible Mrs. Rubens may have been secretly freed from Lubyanka prison and sent out of the country after promising to remain silent on the international case.

But both the United States embassy and the Soviet foreign office denied this rumor. It was generally assumed in authoritative quarters that Mr. and Mrs. Rubens, who entered Russia on fraudulent passports as "Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson," were still in prison awaiting trial.

Meanwhile, it was expected that the Soviet Union, anxious to avoid an open rift with the United States, would shortly strip the entire "Robinson"-Rubens case of its cloak of mystery.

It was pointed out that, with Japanese armies overrunning China and the European situation tense, Russia can hardly afford to incur the risk of losing America's friendliness.

MAY PERMIT VISIT

It was believed possible that, in addition to providing the United States and the world with the facts of the case, the Soviet Union may permit United States embassy authorities to visit Mrs. Rubens in prison, if she is still there.

This step would almost certainly bring down upon Russia the displeasure of more than a dozen other countries whose nationals are being held in jails without the privilege of being visited.

Two Survive Skin Grafting

'Siamese Twins' Given Local Anesthetic

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (INS)—The capital's synthetic "Siamese Twins" were doing well in a hospital here today.

Taking only a local anesthetic, John Melvin Bonner and Clara Howard looked on as doctors detached the upper end of the flesh tube on John's left side and inserted it inside an incision made in the girl's elbow. The children are Negroes.

Clara was a virtual stranger to John when last fall he volunteered to give her about 24 square inches of his own skin, so she would not have to go through life disfigured and disabled as a result of burns.

John has been studying, preparatory to graduation from junior high school this month, while he and Clara were in the hospital readying for the skin-grafting experiment.

He kept Clara's spirit up with light talk while they were on the operating table. Surgeons said the boy's spirit helped make the delicate operation a success.

Although no official reports were submitted to the registrar's office today by inspectors handling the drive, it was announced that in Greater Boston alone scores of motorists were forced to return to the places where they drank liquor last night to reclaim their automobiles.

TAVERNS SCOUTED

The registrar sent 300 inspectors out in the vicinity of taverns, restaurants and night clubs, with instructions to obtain the names and addresses of every motorist who stepped into his automobile after drinking, and to prevent him from operating his car.

The names taken will be turned over to the registrar for further investigation today.

Meanwhile Goodwin filed a bill in the legislature today requiring all dealers in alcoholic beverages to post signs conspicuously on their premises warning patrons that they must not drive automobiles after drinking.

SEES AID IN SIGNS

Discussing the bill, Goodwin said: "With these signs staring these prospective drivers in the face, I think there is no doubt there will be a reduction in drunken driving, but at least the people who are drinking cannot have the excuse that they did not think about it or that they thought they were all right, because they had only one or two drinks."

Find New Breen Clue Hoax

After several days' investigation, Boston police have branded as a hoax the latest tip which promised to solve the slaying of David J. "Beano" Breen, South End racketeer, last month.

After giving police information which involved his former employers in a cafe in Cambridge street, West End, a discharged waiter recanted when confronted with the restaurant owners.

The waiter had gone to police headquarters to report there had been an argument with Breen over a $10,000 gambling debt in the cafe and subsequently a car, similar to the New York automobile sought in the Breen case, was parked outside.

Jaquith Admits Knowing Slain Bandit Pair

Allston Man Denies Any Part in Score Of Holdups

Melvin Jaquith, 25, alleged member of the Dickens-Power gang, today frankly admitted that he knew both of the slain gunmen but denied emphatically he had joined them in a series of holdups, according to police.

Jaquith, who is married and lives on Commonwealth avenue, Allston, was once an honor student at Brookline High School, he confided to Sergeant Detectives Patrick J. Flannery and Arthur Tiernan, who are returning him from Gloversville, N. Y.

"I knew Power and I went to school with Dickens," he said trembling. "But that's all I'm guilty of."

The prisoner said he had lent Sidney Power his automobile on New Year's Eve—the auto which was found in Stoneham at a holdup scene where Power was mowed down by police.

"I loaned him the car. I was with him at the apartment at 115 Norway street, Back Bay. He said he wanted to borrow the car for a few minutes and I loaned it to him. He left. I stayed in the apartment with Ruth Freedman—then I learned he was dead. I was so afraid I ran away," he declared.

The fact that the money box and papers from the Waltham robbery were in his car, is "due to Power," he said.

"When he was in my presence on Norway street, he had a package with him. It was wrapped in newspapers. I didn't know what was in it, but if the Waltham robbery evidence was in the car that's how it got there. I knew Power was bad, and I knew that Ruth was being wanted for questioning, but that's got nothing to do with me. I was not in any robberies and only associated with them. My associations were bad, but not my actions," he declared.

When police questioned him concerning his fingerprints being on a gun found at the scene of the Stoneham holdup where Power met death, he explained it as follows:

"A few days before the robbery you speak of Power showed me a gun. He said it was a new one. I handled it. If my prints are on the gun that's how they got on there."

Reciprocal Pact With Britain Faces Fight

Lodge, Mrs. Rogers Score Hull Plan As N. E. Threat

By ROBERT G. NIXON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8—Secretary of State Cordell Hull today launched the United States on the most ambitious commercial arrangement in its history—a reciprocal trade pact with America's largest customer, Great Britain—but headed straightaway into a storm of congressional protest.

Formal proclamation of this country's intention of negotiating a reciprocal trade arrangement with Britain aroused an immediate division of opinion on Capitol Hill.

Congressional reaction from the New England boot, shoe and textile centers, from the agricultural middle west and from Republican high tariff exponents generally was unfavorable, but this was countered by a heavy Democratic majority which stuck by Hull and his reciprocal trade policy.

HEARINGS AHEAD

But first, extensive public hearings must be held. The hearings open March 14. It is not expected the treaty will be finally signed until May, or later.

In return for certain reductions to Britain, which the State Department insists will not include any bringing harm to competitive American industries, the United States expects to obtain from Britain a huge new market for agricultural products and cattle as well as manufactured goods.

Fear was expressed particularly by New England congressmen that any reduction of tariffs on leather goods and textile might "ruin" these industries.

BLAST BY LODGE

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr. (R.) of Massachusetts, declared:

"Any reduction in the tariff on textiles or boots or shoes would be cruel. It would be a dagger in the back of the people of New England. Our textile mills are barely able to limp along now and if an influx of low priced foreign goods is permitted the injury to our people would be simply appalling."

His colleague in the House, Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers, expressed the fear that if the treaty goes through it will be increasingly impossible to maintain the American standard of living.

Bickford Action Seen Monday

Members of the Legislature are preparing to call for a showdown Monday on charges by Leland C. Bickford, radio commentator, that "Senate votes can be bought from $100 down to a pound of tea," it was stated today by President Samuel H. Wragg of the Senate.

He declared the rules committee would not initiate action against Bickford but that the committee would consider orders which he expects members of both the House and Senate are to file on Monday.

"Meanwhile, we are sitting tight, waiting to see what happens," Wragg stated.

Bickford, still defiant, reiterated his charges today and said he was ready and eager to prove his statements.

"Let them set the date for a showdown," he stated. "I'll be there."

WORCESTER, Jan. 8—Governor Hurley today accepted an invitation to address February 24 the Worcester Rotary Club, the organization that earlier this week heard Leland C. Bickford, radio commentator, charge legislators could be bought "from $100 to a pound of tea."

Cambridge Boy, 14, Arrested in Break

A 14-year-old Cambridge boy faced arraignment in juvenile court today after being caught breaking into the Cambridge Sheet Metal Company, 367 Franklin street, Cambridge.

The boy walked into the arms of Patrolman Thomas H. Leary, stationed in the building to watch for thieves after seven breaks in recent weeks. The boy admitted, police said, he intended to steal one of the automobiles being repaired there.

'Quake' Refugees Return to Homes

BRADENVILLE, Pa., Jan. 8—Families in this village came back cautiously today to the homes they fled when the ground underneath them trembled and began sinking into an old coal mine.

A dance hall and beer parlor cracked open and long fissures showed in the earth over a wide area. The ground dropped three to four feet.

Bechard Ordered to Unlock Auto Door

Policeman Peeps Into Empty Safe

For the second time in a few months the office of the Harvard Brewing Company, South Boston, was robbed by a gun-toting bandit. Brewery employes say same man aided in previous holdup. Nearly $750 was taken today. The bandit today ordered Lionel Bechard, salesman, to unlock his car and walk ahead to the office. There Bechard and two others were kept with hands up while the safe was rifled. Patrolman Thomas Casey stands near the safe.

Find Life Belt In Plane Hunt

SAN PEDRO, Calif., Jan. 8 (AP)—The coast guard reported today a floating patch of oil and a broken life preserver were found by the crew of one of its cutters near San Clemente Island, giving rise to increasing fear that the Navy's missing bomber with seven aboard crashed into the Pacific.

Samples of the oil and the piece of preserver were turned over to naval authorities, who said they were uncertain that the discovery might point to the fate of the huge plane and its crew, which have been unreported since Wednesday.

The portion of the life preserver bore letters "U. S. S." and either an "N" or an "M," but marine men said it might be from any one of the host of surface ships or airplanes that have been searching for the giant seaplane.

Control of Sex Culprits Asked

The parole board today sought complete control over imprisoned sex criminals in a 36-page report submitted to Governor Charles F. Hurley.

The board, headed by Ralph W. Robart, recommended repeal of the law which allows district and probate courts to release defective delinquents. It suggested giving to the parole board entire jurisdiction over releases.

It was stated that such releases should initiate from prison superintendents and not from those interested in the outside world.

The study followed the release of Howard Long from Bridgewater by the Brockton district court on the petition of Judge Arthur P. Stone. Less than a year later, Long was convicted of the murder of a New Hampshire boy and confessed to the death of another.

Bandits Get $15 in Wrentham

WRENTHAM, Jan. 8—Harold E. Forand, 43, and his daughter, Barbara, 16, were forced to lie face down on the floor here early today while three armed bandits looted their Wrentham gas station of $15.

Forand and his daughter were alone when the trio entered. They asked for gas, then produced guns when Forand turned to get it.

French Industries Still Ban Sit-Ins

PARIS, Jan. 8 (AP)—Employers stuck to their guns today in demanding evacuation of "stay-in" strikers from French factories before starting conciliation proceedings. C. J. Gignoux, president of the General Confederation of Employers, emphasized this stand in a letter acknowledging Premier Chautemps' invitation to a conference to restore industrial peace.

Mansfield 'Waste' Hit By Fin. Com. to Tobin

rather than purchase, the report, signed by David Lasker, chairman, E. Mark Sullivan, Robert Robinson, James Maguire and Joseph A. Scolponeti, said:

"Under this policy in the last few years the city has paid hundreds of thousands of dollars for rental of equipment to a selected group of contractors under circumstances which have caused some department heads grave concern, and have led to serious charges to the finance commission involving some officials and some contracting firms."

"OPEN TO FRAUD"

Continuing, the report said:

"The method followed of hiring, checking use of, billing and paying for equipment is now and has been since WPA work became open to fraud and collusion. In some instances charges have been made to the finance commission by employes of firms renting equipment that gross fraud actually occurred."

The commission declared the bookkeeping methods were such that it is virtually impossible to check the truth or falsity of all the charges made.

In that respect, it made this observation:

"The finance commission is convinced that the city has paid many thousands of dollars for rental of equipment that was not needed all the time it was paid for, and often not used at all during the time it was paid for."

LISTS 4 FIRMS

Listing four firms which it alleges had a monopoly of the rental of equipment on the City Hospital job, the commission said "ownership or control of the firms of this group appears to be confined to members of one family."

The firms and the amounts the Fin. Com. says they received in the last two years are:

Arcand Frame & Axle Company, $46,019; Air Compressor Equipment Company, $19,278; Air Compressor & Tool Company, $16,515, and Contractors' Supply Company, $6357.

"LOWEST BIDDER IGNORED

The commission cited one case in which it was alleged the Arcand Frame & Axle Company won the award for a compressor, although it was the highest of four bidders.

"It is important to inform you of the machinations of the City Hall officials involved in this award because they are still on the city payroll," the report says.

The lowest bidder, the commission declares, was J. J. Callahan, who got the contract, with the mayor's approval, filed a bond, signed a contract and then waited six weeks without word from City Hall.

Then he found, the report says, one of the Arcand companies had been continuing the rental of its equipment despite the award to Callahan.

THREATENED TO SUE

Then, according to the report:

"More than two months after the award to Callahan, the Callahan contract was revoked for a reason that appears plainly specious. Then with the mayor's permission a new contract was given to Arcand. In this contract, Arcand's price was 30 per cent higher than the price offered by Callahan."

Callahan told the commission he would sue the city, the report continues, but later he received from the administration an extension of his 1937 snow removal contract and did not sue.

The federal supervisor of the hospital WPA project was criticised for what the commission called inadequate records. The report pointed out rental requisitions usually were for 16-day periods.

URGES CITY PURCHASE

"It is plain to the finance commission that each order was limited to 16 days because payment for 16 days would be well under $1000 and therefore would not attract attention. Very frequently, when the new requisition went out, it would be written to another firm of the same group."

The commission made this recommendation:

"If the city bought a certain number of units and housed them in a central place, they should be available to all departments. This suggests adoption of a policy among departments of lending equipment to each other as occasion arises, rather than the purchase or rental by one department without regard to the fact that another department owns the same type of equipment and is not using it."

Parkman Calls For Race Ban

Declaring the public is disgusted with dog racing in Massachusetts, Henry Parkman, Jr., chairman of the advisory board of the New England Anti-Gambling Association, Inc., today called on the Legislature to eliminate it this year.

Parkman flayed the attempts to nullify the initiative petitions of the association which seek a referendum on both dog and horse race betting. The ballot law commission yesterday upheld legality of the petitions.

Asserting there was no inconsistency in the two petitions, as has been charged, Mr. Parkman pointed out the first is directed against both, while the second concerns pari-mutuel betting on dogs alone.

Brems, Spencer Tobin Aides

Louis J. Brems of East Boston and John J. Spencer, Boston newspaperman, today joined the official family of Mayor Maurice J. Tobin in the respective posts of director of public celebrations and city censor.

Brems' appointment was forecast exclusively two days ago by George Holland in his column "Boston After Dark," widely read Boston Evening American feature.

Brems is a former theatrical producer and was in charge of house rallies in the Tobin campaign for mayor.

Spencer is related through marriage to Timothy F. Tobin, brother of the mayor. He was born in South Boston and took up newspaper work following his graduation from Boston College in 1929.

about this situation," Hughes said, "and I think I can promise that Miss Kenefick will be back to work in our department Monday morning. The others, however, are out."

In the new setup, Samuel Wasson, the former director, becomes assistant to Hughes with a salary cut from $4000 to $2700.

THESE LOSE JOBS

Those dropped from the city payrolls were announced as follows:

CONTRACT BROKEN

Two others dropped were Major James F. Winston and Daniel Hegarty, listed as "contact men" and paid at a rate of $30 weekly.

The group which will handle the work formerly done in the department of 17 will include Warren and Alice G. Carter of Dorchester, who as chief clerk will have charge of five other women clerks.

Hughes pointed out that the department never had a personnel of more than seven in previous city administrations.

Asked to comment further Hughes said:

"What more is there to say? The figures speak for themselves."

CONTRACTS CANCELLED

Today's development in Mayor Tobin's drive to "purge" the city of needless expense closely followed his cancellation of contracts that had been made in the dying days of the Mansfield administration.

It was learned that the young mayor has his eye on other city departments and that he plans startling developments next week in keeping good his promise to give the city an economic administration.

$2000 Bond Set In Shooting Of Stepson

Malden Man In Court After Quarrel Over Electric Light

Arthur W. Brown of Faulkner street, Malden, pleaded not guilty in Malden district court today to a charge of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon on his stepson, Edward Ferry, 16-year-old high school student.

He was held in bail of $2000 by Judge Elbridge G. Davis for trial January 22.

Young Ferry, allegedly wounded in a quarrel over burning an electric light, was under treatment in Malden Hospital for a wound in the left shoulder.

RETURNS HOME

The alleged attack occurred early this morning when Ferry returned to his room in his stepfather's home.

STORY RELATED

Two officers hurried him to the Malden hospital and en route he related the story of the shooting. Questioned about the affair, Brown, police said, readily admitted his part. They quoted his story as follows:

"I had been having trouble with the boy because he continues to stay out late. I didn't want him hanging around the street.

"This morning when he came in I remonstrated with him. I went up stairs a short time later, putting a gun in my pocket. I took the gun because I was afraid the boy would come at me.

"PUT LIGHT OUT"

"When I got up stairs the light in his room was still burning and I told him to put it out. Another quarrel started and he finally put it out. I heard him get up and I thought he was coming at me. I wanted to protect myself and I fired the gun to hit his shoulder."

'Japs' Brutality In Nanking Told to U. S.

American Property Looted, Consul Says in Report

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (INS)—American residences and buildings were looted by rioting Japanese soldiers at Nanking and Chinese civilians wantonly slain and women brutally attacked, according to reports reaching Washington today through official channels.

John M. Allison, American consul at Tsinan, arrived in Nanking on the morning of January 6 and brought details of the looting of the embassy and American residences.

The Chinese servant of third secretary Douglas Jenkins was slain as he sought to protect Jenkins' residence, which was situated outside the embassy compound, from looting by the Japanese soldiers.

AMERICANS SAFE

All Americans, however, are safe, Allison reported.

Foreign refugees reaching Nanking told appalling stories of the wanton killing of the Chinese civilians and of brutal attacks by the marauding Japanese soldiers on women.

The attacks were confined, however, to the Chinese civilian population and Americans were not harmed, though thoroughly terrorized by the systematic looting and destruction of property.

AUTOS SEIZED

Allison, the consul at Tsinan, who was ordered to return to Nanking, sent the first detailed report of happenings there since the gunboat Panay, which was bombed and sunk by Japanese planes, left the city.

Numerous American-owned automobiles were seized, Allison reported, but the Japanese authorities have returned two of them and offered to replace with new machines six others commandeered.

Allison reported the Japanese soldiers, who went on the loose after capturing the Chinese capital, still were imperfectly controlled, but that order gradually was being restored.

Reds Open New Teruel Drive

HENDAYE, France-Spanish Border, Jan. 8 (INS)—Spanish government troops on the Teruel front were engaged today in a mighty, new offensive designed to expel the insurgents from that strategic area.

A brief truce in the crucial battle was arranged by a Red Cross delegation while 300 women, children and aged men were evacuated from Teruel.

They were part of the civilian "hostages" held by a small insurgent group that resisted a siege for nearly two weeks inside Teruel.

The desperate resistance within the 1000-year-old eastern Aragon city was virtually ended today when the commander of the Teruel insurgent garrison and 2000 of his men surrendered, according to a Barcelona dispatch.

3 Robbers Get Delaware Lash

Cat-o'-Nine-Tails Used on Trio

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 8 (AP)—Three convicted robbers were lashed today at the public whipping post to which they were sentenced under a Delaware law older than the state itself.

A gallery of 150 men—women are not permitted—witnessed the whipping administered with a cat-o'-nine tails over the prisoners' bare backs.

Two were sentenced to receive floggings at the solid "pillar of the law" in the yard of the New Castle county workhouse for stealing an automobile, a third for the theft of seven watches and a small safe.

Warden Elwood H. Wilson was ordered by the court to administer 20 lashes to Raymond Shrewbrooks, 21; 10 to David Otavani, 20, and five to Arthur Spain, 21.

CIO Sues Hague To Lift Ban

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 8 (AP)—Charging deprivation of rights accorded by the Constitution and the Wagner Labor Relations act, the Committee for Industrial Organization challenged today in Federal court the declaration by Frank Hague that "The CIO shall never come into Jersey City as long as I am mayor."

The American Civil Liberties Union joined in the suit which asked a permanent injunction restraining Jersey City officials from interfering with the plaintiff's free access on public streets and with their holding of "peaceful meetings."

Mayor Hague, in a statement, called the CIO-ACLU action to hold "peaceful and lawful meetings" "a camoflauge."

Family Dies in Flames

TRENTON, Tenn., Jan. 8 (AP)—A man, his wife and three children were fatally burned in a fire following a coal oil explosion at their residence today.

Cruiser to Be Named By Arlington Matron

Mrs. Dorothy Kays Moonan of Arlington Heights, shown with her father, ex-Commander Harlow T. Kays of the U. S. navy, in his Wellesley Hills home. Mrs. Moonan has received the honor of christening the navy cruiser Phoenix in Camden, N. J., February 1.

An Arlington Heights girl, the only child of a retired naval commander, will bathe the bow of the light cruiser Phoenix with champagne before it slithers down the greased rails of a Camden, N. J., drydock at its official launching, February 1.

Mrs. Dorothea Kays Moonan is the platinum-haired brown-eyed matron on whom this singular honor has been conferred.

In vain she attempted to hide her excitement as she received guests last night in the Wellesley Hills home of her parents, former Commander and Mrs. Harlow T. Kays.

"You see I'm a navy baby," she exclaimed, "so I guess I realize a bit what it all means. I was born in the Philippines, brought up in China. When you've spent most of your life in the navy you can't help absorbing a bit of its etiquette.

"Of course I'm terribly grateful to Governor Stanford of Arizona for suggesting my name. He's an old boyhood pal of daddy's. We became very good friends when I was a student at the University of Arizona."

The pretty young matron, who is not yet 26, married James Moonan, a promising young Boston broker, two years ago.

French-Jap Machine Gun Battle Barely Averted

the incidents, but these protests paled into insignificance in comparison with the drama of machine guns being enacted along the boundary of the French concession.

As the French police and Nipponese troops grimly eyed each other over the barrels of their weapons, Shanghai came closer than at any time during the Sino-Japanese conflict to an "incident" with graver possibilities than anything the Orient has witnessed since the Russo-Japanese war.

ONLY SPARK NEEDED

Only a spark—a single false move—was needed to ignite flames which might have spread far beyond the wildest imaginings of the angry participants in the affray.

In the end, however, both sides calmed down and an amicable settlement was reached.

Cause of the encounter was the arrest of a Chinese woman in French territory.

French police said they saw a party of Japanese soldiers arresting the woman. Immediately the French protested to the Nipponese troops.

Eventually the woman was rescued by the French police and the boundary of the French concession was closed. It was at this juncture that the French and Japanese placed their machine guns in position and made ready for what threatened temporarily to develop into a pitched battle.

ALL SHAKE HANDS

The Russian originally involved in the controversy, after a lot of argument, was escorted to a nearby French fire station.

Then Japanese authorities reached an agreement with French police officials. The affair ended with the French and Japanese shaking hands—45 minutes after their fingers had been itching at machine gun triggers.

Reliable sources said, however, the French were determined to lodge a strong protest with Japanese officials against Nipponese violation of French territory.

Such a protest would be the second of its kind to reach the Japanese in two days. Yesterday British officials protested angrily against action of Japanese soldiers in beating up two British members of the International Settlement police force. A similar British complaint may result from the hotel episode today.

NANKING REOPENED

While the perilous Oriental sideshow was played here, two members of the American consulate general staff, John Allison and James E. Spy arrived at Nanking, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's fallen capital, and reopened the United States embassy there.

In a preliminary report to officials here they said they had been entertained at dinner by the acting Japanese consul general at Nanking and had found the American embassy only slightly damaged by the terrific warfare that engulfed the city before it was captured.

All Americans in Nanking, they said, were safe and well.

At the same time, from all battle fronts, came reports that huge Chinese armies were deploying in positions to launch simultaneous offensives against the Japanese invaders on all major battle sectors.

Jap Premier Plans Four-Year China War

TOKYO, Jan. 8 (INS)—On the announced assumption that Nippon's war with China will last four years, Premier Prince Konoye today placed before his cabinet a four-year plan for maintenance of national resources.

This was the most official of indications that Japan's government believes its campaign may develop into a long conflict.

Observers here also saw a hint in this move of official belief that the Chinese campaign may develop into something general. Never does the Tokyo government forget the menace of Soviet Russia, to the west.

Britain Orders Fleet to Tests

LONDON, Jan. 8 (INS)—Alarmed over developments in the Far East, Britain today took prompt measures to keep Italy in check while showing a strong front to Japan.

Extensive naval maneuvers will be held in the western Mediterranean within the next few weeks, it was learned.

Decision to hold maneuvers in Italy's dooryard came less than 24 hours after the announcement in Rome that Italy was launching a major naval building program, calling for the construction of two 35,000-ton battleships.

Tobin Is Blessed As Cardinal's Ship Sails

Churchman to Spend Winter at Home In Nassau

With a parting blessing for Mayor Maurice J. Tobin of Boston as the youthful chief executive bid him "bon voyage," Cardinal O'Connell sailed today from Commonwealth Pier on the liner Lady Somers for a rest at "The Hermitage," his winter rest home at Nassau in the Bahamas.

Public Safety Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney met the churchman with a uniformed guard of state troopers at the entrance of Commonwealth Pier as the Cardinal arrived from his Brighton home in his automobile and escorted him to the ship.

ACCOMPANIED BY 2

With Cardinal O'Connell was his executive secretary Monsignor Jeremiah F. Minihan and Monsignor Michael J. Spillane, pastor of St. Mary of the Assumption Church, Brookline.

Goga Listing Jew Licenses

BUCHAREST, Jan. 8—A close check on foreign factory workers and the listing of alcoholic beverage licenses issued in the names of Jews is expected to get under way early next week under direction of a special committee named by Premier Octavian Goga. This will give the factories and Rumanian villages a good idea of just how the government intends to carry out its new program.

More than 100,000 Jews now hold alcoholic beverage licenses, it is said, and it is believed many of them would be destitute if the permits were revoked.

At present, there are said to be approximately 40,000 foreign workers in the Rumanian factories an' a high labor ministry official estimated that more than 90 per cent of them could be replaced by natives of Rumania. Those who would be left would be experts of various types.

Search for Boys Missing on 'Dare'

Hub Flier's Brother Dies in Air Crash

Nazis' Jibes at U. S. Awful --If True!

BERLIN, Jan. 8 (INS)—The Nazi press, ever famous for its colorful language, outdid itself today in commemorating the 20th anniversary of publication of Woodrow Wilson's "Fourteen Points."

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff made the anniversary occasion for a ghoulish burlesque of "American conditions," featured by the observation that Wilson's dream of perpetual peace ended with "65,000 people freezing in the streets of Cleveland."

Wed Permit Paid in Cents

CINCINNATI, Jan. 8—Dorothy A. Duncan, 24, and George Munday, 30, sought a marriage license. But when it came to paying $2 for it, Munday said to his fiancee, "You have to pay for this."

The bride-to-be then shook a pasteboard box she carried.

"It's pennies," she stated. "There are 206 of them. Six cents for the sales tax."

On top of the box had been written:

"Needed 200 pennies—Goal: Marriage license."

Dr. Wise to Get Rich Tributes

More than 200 Greater Boston Jewish organizations will sponsor the convention and 1,000 delegates are expected to attend.

Boys Seeking Santa Claus

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 8—Two Providence youngsters have a bone to pick with Santa Claus.

St. Nick gave wheelbarrows to Gilbert Ellinwood, 4, and his cousin, Royal Ellinwood, 6. But, with the recent snow the boys discovered their toys didn't work so well.

The pair searched downtown stores and restaurants yesterday for their bewhiskered old friend to trade their wheelbarrows for sleds. Police found them late at night in front of a Broad street church, pockets filled with doughnuts and candy given by sympathetic storekeepers.

HUMAN PROBLEM NO. 85 APPEARS IN MONDAY'S

BOSTON AMERICAN

New England's Greatest Evening Newspaper

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

ONE OF THE BLACKEST chapters in Boston's political history may be written within a week . . . The writing depends on whether Mayor Tobin chooses to investigate charges of wholesale job-selling, in which sums ranging from $200 to $500 allegedly passed hands in transferring laborers from city institutions to other payrolls — with civil service ratings going with the transfers . . . Not a "crusader" by choice or instinct, this column feels impelled to bring this meanest sort of shakedown out into the open . . . And if three years service in a menial job qualifies a city employe for civil service rating in other departments, there is something wrong with the civil service regulations.

JOTTINGS:

Mayor Roger Putnam, the millionaire mayor of Springfield, is being urged by a horde of supporters to run for the lieutenant-governorship . . . A surprise wedding last night was that of Thomas Fermoyle, the Brockton theatrical man, to Miss Frances Walker, also of Brockton. They left on the midnight for New York . . . Former Councillor John McGrath of Dorchester will run for State Treasurer, so say his friends . . . One expert appraiser has told Mayor Tobin that Boston is over-assessed about 50 per cent . . . More than 90 vacancies are supposed to be existent currently in the ranks of the state police . . . Department stores and other large employers will be asked to co-operate with the city municipal employment bureau in taking relief-getters off the lists.

Bob Floyd, former manager of the Headline Club, has the town's most venerable bar-staff . . . Ed Beasley, of the old Raleigh (next to the Colonial), where the biggest wagers used to change hands, is 72 . . . The other bar-keep at Floyd's "The Snifter," is George Paggi, who confesses to 76 and two-score years experience at the old Rossmore . . . Fire Commissioner William Arthur Reilly does not plan to appear in person at four-alarm fires. A full working-day, 9 to 5, is the new commissioner's schedule . . . His predecessor, the popular Eddie McLaughlin, kept out of the limelight, too.

BEACON HILL MYTHOLOGY:

A fables goes that two Cambridge men met at the State House, and one said to the other: "Imagine meeting you here!"

* * *

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:

Senator William H. McSweeney of Salem is a cinch for a judgeship before the expiration of the Hurley tenure as governor . . . Bill Conway, formerly of this newspaper's staff, is being mentioned as Cambridge's probable next purchasing agent . . . Shake-ups in the police department of nearly every city (except Boston) where a new mayor sits in the big chair are due . . . Somerville's new city treasurer, John J. Donahue (whose appointment was foretold here an hour after it was decided) is 31 . . . His predecessor, Irving G. Wessman, was in the early thirties . . . Final Somerville note: Ex-Mayor Knox is a partner of Douglas Lawson, Inc., Boston insurance firm.

Paul Mullens, manager of the Bradford Penthouse and Miss Harriet H. Cooper of Medford will march to Lohengrin's hit-tune in June . . . They've been engaged since Thanksgiving . . . Cheery word from the Belmont home of Grover Burkhardt, manager of the Gayety, is that the widely-known theatrical man will be back at his desk within three weeks . . . The Herbert Marshes are in discord, with the band leader saying he will not contest a suit for divorce brought in Suffolk Superior Court by his dancer-wife, Derna.

At Hotel Hawthorne, Salem, January 20, the Boston College Club of that city will hold a testimonial banquet to Edward Sullivan, new president of Salem Teachers' College . . . Governor Hurley and Chief Justice John P. Higgins will speak . . . One of the governor's staunchest supporters is Tom Hanfin, the lumber-man from the western part of the state who pops off loudly in praise of the governor at Jimmie O'Keefe's Grill—where the "talk" is mostly Tobin . . . Baron Hugh and his orchestra have been retained to furnish the melodies for the 18th annual dance of the St. John's P. Y. M. C. of Cambridge at the Uptown Ballroom, the 15th of this month.

Landmark Locale of Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor International News Service

(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8—To visit Los Angeles and not see Olvera Street is like going to Washington and not seeing the Capitol.

Louella O. Parsons

Quaint and colorful, it stands as an active landmark of the oldest street in the city. Mexican merchants still sell their wares, restaurants offer Spanish cuisine, ambitious artists exhibit their work, and, all in all, this is a place that even we in Los Angeles enjoy visiting. Interesting that it's the locale of Deanna Durbin's next picture, "Little Street Singer," which follows "Mad About Music."

Interesting also that Konrad Bercovici, one of our better short story writers and novelists, who writes so picturesquely about the gypsies, has been commissioned to prepare the Durbin story. Bercovici was one of the earliest of the top writers to come under the movie influence.

* * *

Mae West's boss, Emanuel Cohen, will probably release her pictures and the movies he has to make with Gary Cooper and Bing Crosby away from Paramount. Manny and this studio are parting company and Para, it is said, will only exercise its option for eight more pictures. Cohen shouldn't find it too difficult to make a new affiliation with the contracts he now holds. He has two with Gary Cooper, several with Bing Crosby and an exclusive one with La West.

The League of Decency, which has been so bitter in its denunciation of the Mae West broadcast, has given its approval to her picture, "Every Day's a Holiday," requesting that only two lines be taken out, which was done promptly.

* * *

Loretta Young rates four beaux to support her in the oddly named "Four Men and a Prayer." George Sanders, the young Englishman who made big strides with "Lancer Spy," gets the top role, while Reginald Denny, David Niven and William Henry (borrowed from M-G-M) are importantly featured.

Interesting to hear the inside story on how Harry Joe Brown dug out "Four Men and a Prayer" after it had been practically shelved, and had it rewritten so that Darryl Zanuck promptly put it down as one of the important Twentieth Century-Fox pictures of 1938. John Ford will direct.

* * *

A Line or Two: A hot and heavy rumor is that Martha Raye has purchased the cafe formerly known as "The Bagdad," and that she'll turn it over to her mother and Pete Bauman (of Buddy Westmore squabble headlines) to manage for her . . . It has been too long since we saw Josephine Hutchinson in a picture, so it is nice to hear she is set for the leading role opposite Ralph Bellamy in "Crime of Dr. Hallett" at Universal.

Al Rogell is trying to talk Lloyd Bacon into letting him put Lloyd's three-weeks-old son into "The Lone Wolf." If his Papa agrees, Frank Bacon, II, will be carrying on the acting traditions of the family practically from birth.

Snapshots of Hollywood

CHARLES BUTTERWORTH is concentrating on LILA LEE and we don't blame him; JUNE CLAYWORTH marries SID ROGELL in February and this time it's no gossip; JOAN CRAWFORD topping all previous eccentric hats by wearing one made of a scarf which ties under her chin. The diners at the night spot stopped eating when she appeared there with JERRY ASHER; VIRGINIA PINE, so rumor goes, will open in a play in N. Y. Friends say the breach between her and GEORGE RAFT will be healed any minute. That's all for today. See you Monday!

A Western Romance

Joel McCrea and Frances Dee find love in the West of long ago in "Wells Fargo," the Frank Lloyd production coming to the Paramount and Fenway next Thursday.

Sally Eilers, looking as pretty as ever and twice as chic, is the star of "Lady Behave," the Republic feature, which opened yesterday at the Hub theater, where "Non-Stop New York" is the companion feature.

Featured with Miss Eilers are Neil Hamilton and Joseph Schildkraut.

Miss Eilers and her sister, played by Patricia Farr, as the story opens, are about to leave for Haiti. On the eve of their departure, the sister, returning home from a Mardi Gras celebration where she has enjoyed too many cocktails, announces that she has married an unknown man.

The elder sister's horror is thoroughly justified for Miss Farr has not obtained a legal divorce from a previous marriage and thus faces a charge of bigamy.

Meanwhile, the latter's mysterious husband, played by Neil Hamilton, has sailed for South America in his yacht, after instructing his attorney to make a settlement on his bride.

for his client's new wife and Sally decides to carry through the deception until her sister's first marriage can be annulled and her second one made legal.

Hamilton, arrived home at the insistence of his children who believe that Sally is an adventuress in love with Joseph Schildkraut, her sister's first husband, discovers he loves the woman he thinks he married.

Out of this tangle all find happiness and, we trust, live happily ever after. P. D.

Panay Film at South Station

The widely discussed official Panay bombing pictures are now being shown at the South Station Theater, which maintains a policy of showing all newsreels of major news events immediately they are available.

New Film Post for Longo

Appointment of Joseph Longo, assistant to Joseph A. Di Pesa, publicity director for Loew's State and Orpheum theaters, as United Artists representative here and throughout New England has just been announced by H. M. Addison, division manager for Loew's theaters. The appointment was made by Carl Kreuger of the home office in New York City.

Joseph Longo

Mr. Longo will commence his new duties on Monday, his first assignment being the promotion of the David O. Selznick technicolor production "Nothing Sacred," co-starring Carole Lombard and Fredric March, which opens Friday at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

Mr. Longo was born in the West End and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Longo of Dorchester. He attended English High School and Boston University. He entered the publicity business seven years ago when he became a member of Mr. Di Pesa's staff. For the past two years he has acted as exploitation head for local Loew theaters.

SHEILA FORGETS TROUBLES IN GAY PARTY

SINISTER FIGURE. Big Gus Mornick, king of Boston racketeers, seeks to turn Sheila's Brother Mickey to his own sinister purposes. And now he, too, is interested in the pretty South Boston girl. How will Sheila handle Big Gus?

GAIETY AT THE TOWNE CLUB. Despite all Sheila's good intentions she finds herself as guest of Brad Talton at exclusive club after her brother's puglistic victory. Left to right are Whit, Patsy, Mickey, Jane Prentiss, Brad and Sheila, who finds her enjoyment of the unexpected evening is marred only slightly by her fears of what Dad Kelly will do when he discovers Mickey has defied him to enter prize ring.

LESLIE BLAKE steps to the microphone at the Towne Club to sing as the dancers, including Brad's party enjoy the music. The two individuals shown circled in the photograph will enjoy receiving $5 each when they call at this office.

SHEILA FINDS HERSELF FACING DECISION

Read This First --- Then Go On With the Story

BEAUTIFUL young Sheila Kelly of South Boston is a State House stenographer, her job dependent on politics. Her steady "boy friend" is Attorney Jerry O'Donovan of Roxbury, former B. C. football star and leader of an intra-party youth movement which aims at a clean-up of Massachusetts and Boston politics. In shielding her young sister, Patsy, from an indiscreet "pickup date" Sheila meets Brad Talton, Harvard student, scion of an old and wealthy Beacon street family.

They are in Liggett's on Tremont street when Sheila catches a glimpse of Greefy Koopman, a drug-addicted gunman in the employ of Big Gus Mornick, head of the Boston rackets. Unknown to Sheila, Mornick is anxious to see some reports on the racket situation she has transcribed for state investigators.

Assigned to shadow her, the unsavory Greefy has previously made the mistake of accosting her when Jerry O'Donovan was in the offing. With a bruised face as a memento of that occasion, Greefy is now being more cautious.

Sheila's alarm is such that Brad Talton insists on accompanying her from the store for protection. Caught in a sudden rainstorm, they take refuge in the Parker House.

Jerry unexpectedly enters. They quarrel over Brad, and Jerry leaves. As Brad is putting Sheila on a subway train for South Boston, he unexpectedly kisses her. Her anger at his presumption is increased when she reads in "Girl About Town" that he is reported engaged to Jane Prentiss, North Shore socialite. She resolves not to see him again.

Her tinge of regret at this decision is accentuated by the storm hovering over the Kelly home. Delphine, an older sister, has split up with her gambling husband, Vince Barton, and returned to the parental roof with her small son, Timmy. Barney Kelly, Sheila's father, has threatened to disown her brother, Mickey, if he persists in his ambition to be a pugilist. And Jerry, while regretting his outburst of temper over Brad, is absorbed in an impending election.

A crisis arises when Sheila learns Mickey has a boxing bout scheduled. She and Patsy hurry to Boston Arena to warn him that their father knows of his intended defiance. They have trouble finding him, and are in despair when Brad Talton, who boxes on the Harvard team, arrives at the Arena with Whit Prentiss, Jane Prentiss, who is Whit's cousin, and Mrs. E. Tucker (Trudy) Wendell, of Dover, Brad's sister, typical of Boston's liberal-minded younger set.

Charmed by Sheila, Trudy asks her and Patsy to use two spare ringside seats, while Brad instructs a gateman to find Mickey. The gateman fails, however, because Mickey is fighting under an alias, and it is not until Sheila sees him in the ring that she is sure her father was right. It's too late to do anything then except applaud Mickey as he knocks out Maggots Maggio—much to the disgust of Big Gus, who is also sitting ringside. Brad dashes to the dressing room bearing a message from Sheila, but finds Big Gus already there, trying to put Mickey under contract. Brad summons Sheila. She hurries out of the Arena in time to stop her brother from entering Mornick's car.

Heroine Must Make Choice Between Two Men

"I didn't know I resembled a fight manager," he said. "Thanks, My name's Talton, and you know now, or ought to, what my business with Mr. Kelly was."

* * *

"Talton," he repeated. "Huh.' That's a hot one on me. An' I pegged you for a loogan handler." He laughed loudly. "Old Cab Talton's boy. You don't know it, fella, but I saved your hide one night. When you upstaged the wrong guy in a certain spot."

"I'm afraid you still have me pegged wrong," said Brad, eyes snapping.

"Yeah?" Big Gus was undisturbed. "Well, I'll tell you about it sometime. And, as for your dad, ask him if he knows Big Gus Mornick." His face heavy with sordid wisdom, he let his appraising glance roam over Sheila again, then, with a knowing leer, back to Brad. "Hmm. An' I thought—well, it's a funny world, ain't it?"

The last bout was over, and people were sifting out of the big doors. Whit among them. He was with Patsy—Trudy and Jane just behind. He flagged Brad.

"Go on," said Sheila. "I can handle this."

"I'll be back," said Brad.

"Still I don't get it," said Mickey, after he was gone. "That mug—and you—being here."

Sheila tried to pitch her voice low enough to escape Mornick's frank attention.

"It's Dad," she said, rapidly. "He found out you were fighting tonight. I came down to tell you. With Patsy. But I couldn't find you under that name. Then I ran into Brad and some friends, and they took us inside. And I saw you knock that fellow out. It was swell! But, Mickey, you shouldn't have. You ought to have known Dad would find it out no matter what name you used. And you know what he said."

* * *

MICKEY stared at the sidewalk.

"Yeah, I know. I thought the phony monicker would cover me up. That's tough. He'll toss me out. I don't care for myself. You know that. But Mom . . . "

"No!" Sheila had been thinking. The sight of Mickey climbing in with Big Gus had clinched a decision long shaping in her mind. "I won't let Dad do it. If he tosses you out, Mickey, he'll have to toss me out, too. And I'll tell him so!"

"You know I wouldn't stand for that," said her brother. "But I won't forget it Sheila. But what I don't see"—

"Say," interrupted Big Gus, impatiently, "what's all this about? Whyn't you tell me your old man was down on the fight game, kid? I ain't takin' cards in nobody's family deal." Big Gus prided himself on figuring all the angles, and his proficiency at it was largely responsible for his undesirable eminence. Sheila and Brad were factors he hadn't counted on. Before he did any more business with Mickey, he wanted to know just where Cabot Talton's son stood in relation to Sheila Kelly. Funny about that girl.

"Listen"—and he tried to resemble that public misconception of Big Gus Mornick, the big-hearted friend of man, "you listen to your sister, kid. She's 18-karat. I can tell. Then some time soon me and her and you will get up to my joint and talk it over. Together. See?"

"Why?" objected Mickey. "You changed your mind about going through with our deal?"

"Don't worry about that, kid," said Big Gus, shifting his cigar to an affable angle. "You talk to your sister. She's wise. I got to scram now. The class is gettin' too thick around here. See you later." With a knowing wink at Sheila, he was gone.

Jane Prentiss, sister of Brad Talton's roommate and reported engaged to Talton, plays a vital role in the affairs of Brad and Sheila. Muriel Cochrane plays the role of Jane.

* * *

AROUND the corner on Massachusetts avenue, he picked up Greefy, waiting in front of a drugstore on Massachusetts and Columbus avenues. He had young Maggio with him.

"Got the rozzin brushed out of your ears?" Big Gus wanted to know.

"Gee, boss," said Maggio in hasty defense. "I done my best. That kid's got a sleep punch in both hooks. I never got goin', I didn't."

"Nerts," said Big Gus. "You got round heels. Lettin' a punk like that wing you in the first heat!"

"You don't figure I laid down?" he asked, terror in his tone. "You know I wouldn't pull nothin' like that on you. Gimme another chance, Gus."

Mornick's manner changed.

"Forget it, Mag," he said. "I know you wouldn't flop on me. You got more sense."

"You're tellin' me!" said Maggio with relief.

That was the Mornick system. Scare 'em, then give 'em a pat. Make 'em grateful they were alive. That was how to keep them in line—pugs, number pool agents, bookies, and all the rest of his far-flung syndicate of lawlessness.

By and large, Big Gus decided, as he continued to his stronghold in the South End on the top floor of a seeming garage building, off Broadway, things were okay. Recognition of Brad had temporarily held up his plans for Mickey. And this Sheila Kelly was no sap. But wait till he got the dope on her and Talton. She'd warble a new tune then if he knew dames. Wouldn't hurt to pick up a little lowdown on the Talton kid, at that. Might come in handy. Kind of a fresh punk, anyhow. But you couldn't get tough with a lug like that.

* * *

"An admirer of yours," Brad introduced her to Mickey. "She yearns for your autograph."

"Cranberries!" replied Jane. "Brad said you were leaving, and I vetoed it. We need men in this party, strong men and not too true."

"Where's Patsy?" asked Sheila.

"That's all right," soothed Brad. "She's where we're going next. At the Towne Club. She and Whit got tired waiting. Trudy's with them."

"At the Towne Club!" Well! Sheila was intensely aggravated! Still, bringing Patsy had been her own idea. But the nerve of the child! She glanced at Mickey.

"Guess we'll have to go after her," he said.

But the Towne Club. Of course not. They weren't dressed for it — not as Sheila would have liked. Well, she just wouldn't go in. Yet, somehow, they presently were in a cab with Jane and Brad, and the cab had stopped on Winchester, and they were all getting out.

As they entered, they saw Patsy and Whit already on the dance floor.

"Good evening, miss. Good evening, sir," Earl Cossaboom, the manager, greeted them all impartially, and led the way to Trudy's table.

* * *

TRUDY greeted them warmly.

"So glad your brother could come," she said to Sheila. "And I adored the way you polished off that Maggio person, Mr. Kelly. I do like to see things well and neatly done."

"He hasn't a thing but a roundhouse right," said Mickey, grinning. "But it's a sweetheart when it connects. He had me hearing bells that first punch." He glanced at Jane. "That's good hot swing stuff those boys are dishing out, Miss Prentiss."

"Let's show them we appreciate it," Jane said, rising, and giving Brad a cool glance of challenge.

Brad's reply was to rise and bow to Sheila.

"Go ahead," said Trudy, as Sheila hesitated, not wanting to leave her alone. "I'm not neglected. Brad will tell you my pet complex about dancing."

"She dances with nobody but Tuck," said Brad, as they threaded their way between the tables. "Never has since they were married. They're nuts about each other. And the funny part is that Tuck's a lousy dancer and Trudy's a fire-ball."

"That's why," said Sheila wisely, "I think it's sweet."

"Trudy's a grand guy," said Brad, "Everybody knows it. Thats why she can get away with murder."

Trudy understood. That was what it was like to be really on the top of the heap. So secure you could ignore the Social Register.

As for Brad—

"Remember what I told you at the Parker House?" he said. "Well, that goes triple. How about saving all your dances for me?"

ALTOGETHER, it was an evening. Marred only by a few minor worries which, because she was young and loved to dance, and probably would never have another evening like it, Sheila contrived to keep well in the back of her trim little head.

Strangely, the most recurrent of these worries was about herself, not Mickey or Patsy. It kept humming around in her brain with the music:

"I like this too well. It's too wonderful—this lovely place—this music—Brad—everything. Tomorrow I'll have to go back to my typewriter. And tomorrow night there'll be no Towne Club, no Brad. And—I'll miss them."

Tomorrow. Why within twelve hours she'd be lunching with Jerry. Probably at Child's. They'd walk across the Common and look at the fallen leaves and talk about people they both knew.

Then she'd go back to her job and he to his law office or, more likely, to one of his endless campaign meetings.

She wondered whether she'd ever love Jerry enough to give up dancing with other men, as Trudy had. She doubted it. Yet she liked dancing with Jerry, on the rare occasions when they went dancing. Even if he stepped on her once in awhile. That was the kind of a person Jerry was. He could step on your feet and you liked it. Brad never stepped on your feet, so . . . you never knew.

"What are you doing Saturday, besides being beautiful?" Brad asked.

She said she'd be working until noon. After that, she didn't know.

"Harvard's playing Dartmouth at the Stadium," he said. "I've got a half date with somebody, but I might break it. In fact, I think I shall."

"Don't dare to," she told him.

Then it was long after midnight, and Patsy was sneaking sips out of Whit's highball, and Jane Prentiss was looking at Mickey in a way Sheila didn't like—and at her in a way she didn't like either. And Trudy was mildly and elegantly lit. And Brad, oblivious to Jane's occasional exasperated stares, was moving rapidly into the heavy love-making department.

Time to leave. Definitely. She'd phoned earlier, telling Del that Mickey was with her, and they'd be late, and not to worry. But Mom had a way of waking up around midnight if any of the family were out. And it was time to leave anyhow. Time to thank Brad, and fend off the goodnight kiss she really wouldn't have minded. To float round once with him to, "I'm Dancing With Tears in My Eyes." To tell him no, positively, that Mickey would see her and Patsy both home. Time to say farewell to the Towne Club and Winchester street.

* * *

MICKEY was funny going home . . . imitating Brad's Harvard intonation . . . wondering how she'd ever got tangled up with such a mob . . . declaring that Prentiss kid wouldn't be hard to take if she'd lay off the side-cars.

Dan Carroll, prominent in the ranks of Boston sportsmen and widely known as a promoter of boxing and manager of boxers, who will figure in later chapters of this serial.

Rivalry of Pair Takes Definite Form in Invitations

A strict non-drinker himself, Mickey had been shocked at the amount of alcohol consumed. And Patsy . . . after they got home . . . telling what she was going to tell Mom after she got to be Mrs. Whitney Prentiss. Sheila felt bound to toss a dampener on that. Patsy sounded too serious. But Patsy only drooped her eyelids, the way she'd been drooping them at Whit Prentiss all evening, and said:

"Rahwly, my dyeah, you give me a pain. Why pass up a nice boy because he's sticky with relations—and money? I know—Whit's this and that. But maybe I can make him see the light. If I can't, there'll still be plenty of good boys in this neighborhood. So what?"

It sounded logical, the way she said it. The only trouble was Sheila was sure it wouldn't work out. If it would—but Sheila dropped asleep without deciding what she'd meant to hang on the "if." Probably, for her peace of mind, it was just well.

With morning came Barney Kelly, tired from his weary watchman's round at the warehouse. Sheila prepared to tell him all about Mickey and her own decision. But, with seeming inconsistency, her father chose that morning to forget he'd ever made any threats.

"Let it pass," he said. "The boy fought and you tell me he won. That's better than if he'd taken a licking. And that's all I want to hear about it. Except that if he's going to perdition regardless, let him do it under his own name. No more aliases."

The truth was that Barney Kelly's original informant had also brought him word of Mickey's victory and the strange alias he'd fought under, Brian O'Lynn. With his heart and pride both touched, the old headquarters sergeant had weakened and, at least temporarily, surrended.

So Sheila went to her job at the State House on wings of elation. Happily she waited through the morning for Jerry's phone call, telling her where they'd meet. He'd probably gripe a little about her trip to the Towne Club with Brad, but he'd understand.

* * *

WHEN his call finally came, it was both a disappointment and a pleasant surprise. Disappointing because they couldn't have lunch together—he was scheduled to make a campaign speech at a luncheon club.

Then the surprise.

"I'll be waiting for you when you come out tonight, and we'll eat and go to the movie. If that suits you. Then, if you feel like it Saturday, we'll go to the B. C.-Detroit game."

B. C. games with Jerry were always fun because everybody knew him. All-American tackles weren't easily forgotten. And Sheila had eagerly accepted before—she remembered Brad's remark about taking her to the Dartmouth-Harvard game. Was that on the coming Saturday, too? She consulted Pete, the office boy, who was an authority on such matters.

"Huh!" His voice betrayed amazement that even a girl could be so ignorant. "Sure. At the Harvard Stadium."

So Sheila has two engagements for football games Saturday! Which will she accept? For the romantic outcome of her decision, see Monday's chapter of this amazing all-Boston serial, in all editions of the Boston American, every day.

'ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY'

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

CHAPTER 37

"You are not to be blamed, Fritz," Count Helm said. "I await some explanation, Prince Von Behrling, of this extraordinary behaviour."

Van Behrling was swelling again with passion.

"Explanation!" he repeated. "Is this not a conference of vast importance to the interests of Europe, being held here upon my land under my own roof—a conference of which I have been kept in ignorance?"

"You are incorrect," was the cold reply.

"It is true that we are upon land owned by your family and under the roof of your lodge, but these have been granted by deed of charter to the house of which my uncle is the head and I the representative for countless years. You have no more right here without an invitation than a beggar."

"Answer me this then," von Behrling demanded. "Have I no right to sit at the table when the future of my country is being determined?"

"This is a conference," Count Helm announced, "of sane men drawn together from the various countries of Europe, having in mind one object—the preservation of peace and the prestige of the Fatherland.

"The matter which we have had to discuss is one that would have been embarrassing to you. For that reason you were not invited. And now consider your intrusion an affront."

A PERTINENT QUESTION

"Himmel!" von Behrling roared. "My intrusion on my own property! These are my lands. I stand under my own roof! Why must I remain dumb?

"Why must I be excluded from this gathering when it is the future of my country—and my conduct as well—which is under discussion?"

Matresser scrawled a line hastily upon a piece of paper and passed it to the President. The latter glanced at it and nodded gravely.

"How did you know, von Behrling," he asked, "that your conduct was to come under discussion here?"

"I knew," was the sullen acknowledgment.

"With your permission, sir," he said. "I will answer that question. The Prince von Behrling knew that his conduct as governor of a certain East African Colony was to come under discussion by securing a private letter written to me by our foreign secretary in reply to a report for which I was responsible.

"He secured that letter by murdering, or causing to be murdered, the messenger, whose body still lies, awaiting the final inquest in the neighborhood of my home.

"Prince von Behrling arrived under a false name in a small boat, with a possible accomplice, in my home harbor—"

"You lie!" von Behrling broke in. "I announced myself as Mijnheer van Westrheene. I am the twelfth Baron van Westrheene and my estates in Holland have been in my family for eleven generations."

"Very well then," Matresser conceded. "You arrived there bearing a name other than that by which you are generally known.

"Having satisfied yourself, by either murdering or assisting at the murder of the messenger, that I had made my official report upon your conduct, you then made a deliberate attempt to kill me in my own woods and also a young lady connected with a great Austrian family. I escaped death at your hands, Prince, by a miracle."

ORDERS TO LEAVE

"I would kill any man," was the harsh reply, "who stood between me and my resumption of the great work I commenced for my country."

Count Helm pointed towards the door.

"You are, as you have reminded us, von Behrling, upon your own lands and under your own roof and I shall not ask the foresters to break their allegiance of centuries even at my command. I order you to go back the way you came and not to reappear."

Von Behrling hesitated. The man was racked with emotions. His cheeks were flushed—even his forehead was scarlet.

"If in this fit of madness, von Behrling," the other continued, "you refuse to obey my commands, I have here a personal escort, within a minute's call only to be used in case any emergency should arise.

"Unless you obey my orders, they will be summoned. They will have no hesitation whatever in arranging for your immediate expulsion. I should lament such an indignity being offered to one of the leading noblemen of my country.

Von Behrling, with folded arms, stood perfectly still for nearly a minute; then he turned on his heel and, escorted by his two guards, left the room. Von Helm, whose eyes had followed his every movement, turned away with a frown.

"There goes, I fear, a still dangerous man," he said.

"HE MET HIS FATE"

There was a brief period of silence. Everyone was listening to the starting of the car. Soon they heard it go roaring down the hill.

"The air," Signor Corletti declared, "seems purer."

(A week or so later, Von Behrling alias Van Westrheene met his fate in an airplane crash.)

Hellstern rose to his feet. He turned toward the President.

"Is it permitted that I say a word?" he asked.

"It is permitted," was the grave response.

"Having seen and heard the Prince, I accept the report presented to us by our colleague, Lord Matresser. I say that Germany should accept the peace offer and should give all the required pledges to keep the peace.

"I, who am passing into the shadows of the political world, offer this recommendation to the powers who will take my place."

Von Helm nodded gravely.

"Our old Leader Hellstern," he said, resuming his conversational manner and remaining seated, "will be declared by history to have played the part of a great patriot in this crisis.

"This offer of Great Britain, which makes the regeneration of our country possible, is made to a new Imperial Germany—to a Germany that will control her army with a firm hand and will carry out every sacred pledge for the preservation of peace.

"We welcome that offer, Hellstern and I together—he who has ruled through a more difficult period of our history and I who intend to lead Germany in its pacific development—accept it.

"Solely and simply to save them from embarrassment, I suggest now that General Besserley, Lord Matresser and Sir Esmond Curtels leave us for a time.

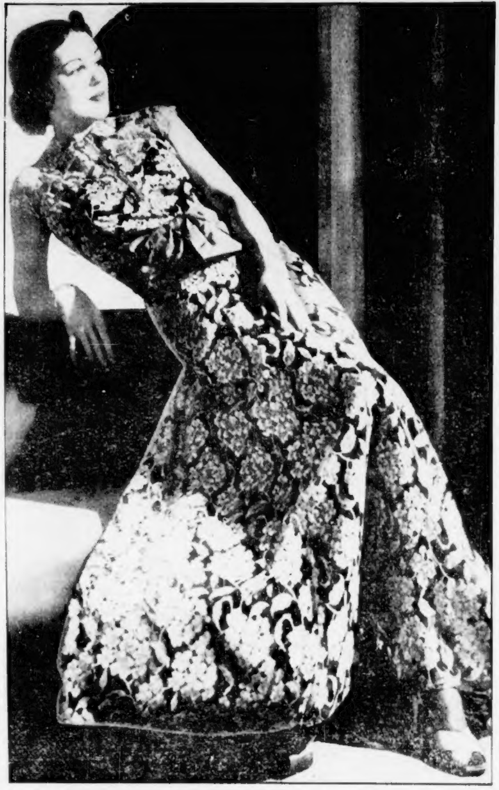
Light-on-Dark Lace



IF YOU'VE a sense for the dramatic, you'll appreciate this lace dress . . . for as much of a dear, dependable darling as lace is for anyone from sixteen to sixty, for anything from a cruise to commencement week parties, we must admit it is all too seldom vital and dramatic. In a mantilla on a Velasquez lady—yes, of course; in ivory richness on some striking girl with matching skin and real pearls at her throat, or some such extraordinary case. Now, here is a lace frock which will make any one of us take on a sudden spirit and dash—for it is white on sheer black lace ground of Chantilly type, girdled widely with deep red grosgrain ribbon. Contradictory and effective is the little-girl collar and the [illegible] fastened high front. It'll make your theater and dancing nights memorable, or high-spot your cruise nights.—ANNICE BRINK.

By IDA JEAN KAIN

HIT-OR-MISS EXERCISES MISS!

By IDA JEAN KAIN

THE real problem with most figures is how to reduce in some spots and develop in others, but exercise iss now down to a science whereby you can add curves or reduce bulges, or both.

With a program of specific exercise you can reduce or develop the upper arms, strengthen the muscles which support the bust, slim the waist and hips and reduce or develop the legs.

That may sound complicated, but it's all in knowing the best mechanical positions for putting these various muscle groups to work.

You may use your arms a great deal and they may still lack firm rounded contours. Ordinary arm movements require the use of only the front muscles, and to tone the muscles on the backs of the arms you must exercise in one of two positions.

The arms may be exercised at shoulder level or thrust outward from the shoulders. Try these positions and you can feel the pull on these muscles in the backs of the arms.

Consistent exercise will reduce or develop the arms as needed and will firm and smooth the contours.

* * *

Since the pectoral muscles supporting the bust are inserted in the upper arms, it is easy to understand why arm exercises also strengthen the muscles of the chest. You will derive a double benefit from any arm exercises in which the arms are moved in circles, raised overhead or pushed against resistance.

At the same time you are strengthening the muscles of the bust, you may save part of your exercise time stretching, twisting and bending movements which take inches off the waistline. To strengthen the abdominal muscles, the best position is flat on the back, knees flexed, feet flat on the floor.

It takes exercise of an entirely different type to affect the size of the hipline. This measurement yields most readily to swinging exercises in which the leg is kicked backward to an angle of 45 degrees.

The big fleshy muscles on the back of the hips are also brought into action in outward rotation of the legs from the hip joint. Perhaps the easiest hip-reducing is accomplished by the massage treatment of the rolling exercises, in which the flabby fat is literally rolled off.

* * *

In beautifying the thighs you must do those exercises which flex the knees and move the legs in outward and inward circles.

As to exercise rules . . . there are only three to remember. You should correct your posture at the beginning of each exercise.

Exercise in a gym suit or other suitable clothing—don't try to exercise in a dress! You may exercise in a room that is comfortably warm, but have the windows open to provide plenty of fresh air. You use more oxygen when you are using your muscles.

If you will keep these three rules in mind and take advantage of the correct exercise positions, you can change your measurements to suit yourself.

Added Glory For Your Hair

I LIKE stories that have a happy ending.

It distresses me to see women using unsuitable preparations and ruinous methods in their effort to hide white or grey hair.

Beautiful white hair is one of the most distinguished things in the world! Why should anyone struggle to cover up that which she can make into a crowning glory?

If your hair is going to be grey or white in spite of you, the idea is to make it hair that is lovely to look at. Then play it up for all it's worth!

A little bit brighter, a little bit whiter—that is what your hair needs to be really ravishing! All these may be had in a bit of minor magic that works a real transformation!

Controversy about tints for grey hair will go on as long as there is grey hair. With such dissension it is surprising that so many beautiful women are liking this particular bluing rinse that I want you to try. But like it they do; several regard it as their private formula and personal discovery. Nothing else, according to them, is any good!

The grey it leaves is clear and steely, the hair loses its yellow lights and takes on a new sheen! It is used in New York's best salons, and I am told by reliable authority her in town that this tint has no equal. They also tell me it is used with surprising and gratifying results in toning down hair that has been bleached or hennaed, and I know many times it has proved a life-saver on white hair after a permanent. With an eye-dropper, just so many drops of this tint are used in your rinsing water, suiting it to your individual need. If this all spells added glamour for you surely it is the perfect finis!

Write in, enclosing a self-addressed-stamped envelope, or phone me at Liberty 4000, and the name of this silvery tint and also the name of the store where it is stocked will be given you.

Your Linen Inventory

January is an excellent time to check over the supply of household linens and make replacements when necessary. That applies to kitchen hand towels and dish towels as well as to bed linens and requisites for the bathroom.

In fact table linens of softly gleaming satin damask, in pale pastel colors, help the hostess to achieve a flattering setting for formal parties. There are such very pale pastels as pearl pink, ice green and powdery blues. For more dashing effects are dubonnet damask with the contrasting design in silver gray. Fashionable also is silver gray. And rose beige is warm and flattering.

Listen, World!

Liberty Must Be Earned

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Everybody wanting rights these days. Lots of rights. Just as much privilege and power, just as much liberty and opportunity as the next fellow. Everybody sharing equal—OR ELSE!

Plenty of picklement? I'll say. Harry E. Owens and I were talking it over. Harry's the power—that of top telephone affairs in Sacramento, Calif. He'd dropped in—just one of those neighborly mountain junkets—over four hundred miles. Rough road, snowy skies, a storm ahead.

But it wasn't—we agreed—the first storm that either of us had known. Nor the first tough going. So, while the back log crackled, we sat talking things over—wondering where it was all heading. Everybody wanting things soft 'n' equal, wanting things free.

"But it can't be done," said Harry Owens in his quiet way. "Life doesn't happen like that. You can't make people free or give them rights . . . they've got to earn it themselves. In a democracy as well as everywhere else."

You can't make people free—I started thinking, as you are doing. Thinking of the times when I've demanded "rights and liberty," and have been given what I asked. But they didn't "take." They couldn't. For "rights" and liberty aren't outside things . . . something that can be handed you as a favor, or legislated for you by law. They're an inside process . . . a one-man job.

Take yourself, for example. Has anyone ever made you "free"? Given you "rights"? I'll say they haven't. If you have any, you wrung them—fought for them—built them bit by bit—out of yourself, didn't you? Yes, there were outside circumstances. Kindly people and lucky breaks. But when it came to being free and living regular . . . you had to do it on your own, or go without.

You didn't believe that at first. You thought if you yelled hard enough . . . worked up enough steam . . . you'd get a swell deal. But after all the whining and the fighting and the self-pity, you were right where you started, weren't you? And now you see the reason.

FOR A BIG LIFE ISN'T SOMETHING YOU CAN GET OR BE GIVEN . . . IT'S SOMETHING YOU MUST MAKE . . . MAKE OUT OF YOUR OWN SELF . . . OUT OF THE DEPTHS WITHIN YOU . . . OUT OF THE DREAMS AND THE DISILLUSIONMENTS, THE EXPERIMENTS AND FAILURES, THE STRUGGLES AND SACRIFICES . . . OUT OF ALL THESE, YOU SLOWLY MAKE YOURSELF, YOUR LIFE, YOUR LUCK . . . YOUR LIBERTY . . . AND IF YOU DON'T? WHY—THAT'S JUST YOUR BAD BREAK!

Simple words, aren't they? Once every American accepted them as a commonplace. Never dreamed of questioning them. Built himself and his nation upon them. Got his life, luck and liberty that way—or went without.

Once everyone lived by those words. But now . . . Now they surprise us . . . insult us . . . make us mad . . . make us feel that some tough So-'n'-So is trying to put something over on us. But we're wrong.

Those words aren't strange or irregular or unfair. They're the living Truth. They're as true for a turnip as they are for a man . . . as true for a ditch digger as they are for a dictator.

YOU MAKE YOUR LIFE AND LIBERTY . . . OR YOU GO WITHOUT.

You can pile on extra taxes . . . and select new alphabet commissions . . . and go around kissing everyone 'n' calling him Your Brother—

BUT IF THE INDIVIDUAL DOESN'T CARVE OUT HIS OWN NEW DEAL . . . ALL THE FAVORS YOU CAN HAND HIM ARE GONE WITH THE WIND . . . AND I DON'T MEAN MAYBE.

While the provisionals are learning the basic principals of social service work, the instruction of the older members of the league is not being neglected . . . A great many girls are working three days a week as volunteers at hospitals and charitable agencies . . . At the Family Welfare Society, one of the agencies to which volunteers are sent, 15 league girls are working as case-work aides and conference members . . . The League Welfare Department has planned a series of four discussion groups so that volunteer workers may become more familiar with the variety of problems which case-work involves . . . Cruise Clothes For Men

MEN WHO go on cruises don't want all the sartorial honors to go to women. They, too, want to be properly clothed and just any sort of clothes won't do. Here's just what to take:

Have a lightweight sports suit of cashmere or tweed as the basis [illegible] your cruise wardrobe, he advises. You will wardrobe. You will probably wear this suit when you embark on the [illegible] variety to your wardrobe and add to your comfort. They have another advantage, too, in not taking up too much room in packing. This is a point to be considered.

Everyone dresses on board ship at night, so a dinner jacket is essential. Coolness is the goal in hot weather and with the double-breasted dinner jacket, a waistcoat need not be worn. With the single breasted coat—if your figure permits—you may wear a cool silk cummerbund.

Your wardrobe should also include:

Sports shirts and soft, collar-attached shirts in goodly numbers in case of uncertain laundry facilities. White and brown-and-white sports shoes, with leather soles for general wear and rubber soles for deck walking and games. Also one or two lightweight Shetland sweaters, a beach robe and bathing trunks.

Wise Women Laugh at Neighborhood Gossip

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

If a woman has a clear conscience and knows she is doing the right thing, she should continue to lead her own life in her own way.

This is the good advice I am sending today to a reader who [illegible] "Old-Fashioned Mother." But I strongly recommend it to all readers.

Irritability Bares Nervous Case

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

NEURASTHENIA is a medical word used to describe a certain feeling of exhaustion and a state of poor health without apparent cause.

The disorder was formerly believed, too, to be purely an imaginary one. Persons afflicted with nervousness and nervous breakdowns were politely called neurasthenics. Today it is accepted as a definite functional disorder of the nervous system. The excessive fatigue and lack of energy are the characteristic symptoms.

The victim complains of severe exhaustion, even after the slightest exertion. There may be loss of memory, poor appetite, insomnia and loss of weight. In general, the sufferer is below par and in apparent poor health.

Irritability and nervousness are outstanding symptoms. Often the victim will complain of digestive disturbances and suffer from marked indigestion and constipation. The condition often follows some severe emotional disorder.

As I have said, it is found in the child as well as the adult. The youngster with this disorder is usually overburdened with school work. In consequence, he is deprived of the necessary hours of play in the fresh air and sunshine.

Other signs are present. These must be detected by the physician before the diagnosis of neurasthenia is confirmed. A thorough physical examination is essential for anyone who complains of these symptoms.

LENGLET IN LINE TO MEET LOUIS-MAX WINNER

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
BOSTON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 8, 1938

MR. BOSTON

Lenglet Is Growing Now 6 ft. 4 in. | Right Hand Set To Stop McCoy

By JACK CONWAY

Mr. Boston

ANDRE LENGLET of France, who bumps his head against the ceiling when he steps into a room, dropped into this office in the company of Dave Arata of the Goodwin A. C. front

Lenglet told me he had just come from Harry Kelley's Gym on Hanover street where he had tuned up his right hand by punching away at Emil Schultze of Germany, "Buck" Tracy of Everett and Jimmy Howell of New York. Howell is in town to meet Roy Kelley of Brookline in the semifinal to the Lenglet-McCoy bout at the Garden on Monday night

Lenglet looked as if he is in perfect physical condition. The Frenchman is 6 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 201 pounds, and is only 23 years of age

"I am still growing," confided Lenglet. "I am an inch and a half taller than when I came to the United States two years ago

"I am 20 pounds lighter than when I started my career as a boxer. This is because I have trained off all excess weight. I am anxious to keep my weight as close to 200 pounds as possible. If I should go as high as 210 pounds, I would lose some of my speed"

I asked Lenglet what he thought the outcome of his bout with McCoy would be

"I'll knock McCoy out," said Lenglet with an air of confidence. "I punch too hard for Al with my right

"When I fought McCoy in Montreal, I nailed him with a perfect right-hand punch to the jaw. I shot my wallop inside of McCoy's wide left hook.

"McCoy went down for a count of nine. I then sent another right to the jaw. This blow was better than the first one I landed, and McCoy was groggy when he got up at a count of nine. It was an easy matter for me to finish the New England champion with another right.

"I was glad when the referee stopped the bout. I did not wish to hit McCoy with another right as he was helpless."

Lenglet speaks fair English. He told me he has already made application for American citizenship papers

"I want to make the United States my permanent home," said Lenglet.

"Won't you miss the French wine?" queried Arata

Lenglet still insists he could knock out Max Schmeling as easily as he did McCoy in Montreal.

"I saw Schmeling fight Harry Thomas in New York," declared Lenglet. "He is not difficult to hit with a right-hand sock to the jaw, and so I could not miss licking him.

"I think Joe Louis is a much better fighter than Schmeling despite the fact the German stopped the champion in their last tussle. I look for Louis to show improved boxing ability when he meets Schmeling again. Louis should leave the ring champion."

Corcoran Values Squint at Loy Worth $1.40

Freddie Almost Wins $80 on Hot Tip At San Anita

Until he was invited to Santa Anita recently by "Bing" Crosby the radio crooner, Freddie Corcoran, tournament manager of the P. G. A. had never sat on a horse [illegible]

Along with "Granny" Rice, the sports authority, and "Bing," Freddi drove down to Santa Anita from Hollywood. He didn't know a horse from a jockey. But, he was brought up in Cambridge and for years had watched the Coffee A. C. strut their stuff in Harvard Sq. restaurants. So, he cocked his weather ear whenever he came within earshot of anyone he thought was a horse expert.

ACROSS THE BOARD

Finally, Freddie had heard so many of the boys mention "Gray Jack" that he went for a six dollar combination ticket on that nag

Then he rejoined his party and told them that Gray Jack was his horse. And Gray Jack finished a city block out in front of the other hobbies in that race.

"Say Bing, where do I cash this ticket," cried Freddie, excitedly, for he's always had to work hard for any $80 he ever acquired

"Whoa, Freddie, hold everything," declared Crosby. "Just as soon as the numbers and prices are posted, study them carefully, particularly the odds, and then dash right over to that window and collect."

While he was receiving his instructions for the pay off from "Bing" Crosby, Freddie was the recipient of congratulations from all of the members of his party, none of whom had a ticket on Gray Jack

BAD NEWS

Then came the bad news.

Out in front of the judges' stand flashed a sign

"Foul claimed against Gray Jack."

Then, a few minutes later,

"Foul allowed."

"Gray Jack disqualified."

For the remainder of the afternoon Freddie Corcoran admired the movie queens, who had trekked down from Hollywood, while biting his finger nails. And, he has never displayed such remarkable concentration. It wasn't the thoughts of having "blown" the six bucks. It was the shock from having come so close to winning $80.

Foul Ruins P. G. A. Boss' First Visit To Horse Track

His consolation, if any, came from two hours of "lamping" movie stars. When he started back to L. A. Freddie figured that he had been short changed about $78.60. Even Myrna Loy's fetching around was not enough to offset the loss of that $80.

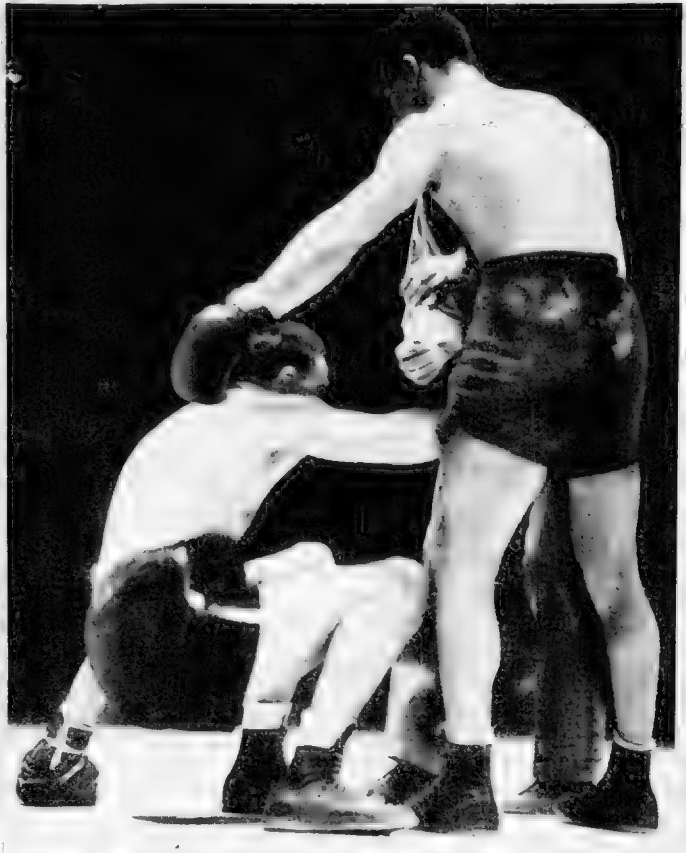
Champion Dusts Off Ring Floor



Freddie Steele of Tacoma, Washington, still retains his middleweight championship but the nine-round knockout of the champ by Fred Apostoli of San Francisco, last night in the Madison Square Garden impressed the boxing fans of the country. The Italian slugger is the rightful owner of the diadem. Apostoli, who was shoved off by Steele in their last encounter [illegible] severe beating Steele ever assimilated in his ring career.

FROZEN FACTS

McGill Six Steals Play in Montreal

Interest in Olympics Running High

By BILL GRIMES

BILL GRIMES

The Quebec Senior Hockey League plays such a high grade brand of hockey at reduced prices that it outdraws the Maroons and Les Canadiens, 2 to 1 and even 3 to 1. In fact, Montreal enthusiasts have deserted the N. H. L. clubs to such a startling degree that Maroons are looking around for a new city to represent in the Calder loop.

[illegible]

In the International Intercollegiate Hockey League McGill has soundly thrashed Princeton, University of Montreal and Dartmouth. It has amassed a total of [illegible] goals, against one for its opponents. [illegible] last Thursday night in Hanover. The Big Red team knocked off Princeton [illegible] and after hanging a 9 to 0 shellacking on Montreal, tossed the Indians of the North half way up Baker Hill, winning by the generous wide margin of 13 to 1, despite the fact that Dartmouth has a pretty good country hockey team of its own, one which went through eight consecutive games without a defeat prior to running afoul of McGill.

[illegible]

Although [illegible] Montreal [illegible] with the Montreal players [illegible] the other Quebec Senior Hockey League teams.

But still the facts remain that the competition and calibre of play is such in the Quebec Senior group as to cause great glee among the owners of the Maroons and Les Canadiens when ever they play to 5,000 cash customers.

Just a few years ago during the regimes of Jimmy Strachan and Joe Cattarinich, tickets for all Maroons and Canadiens games played at the Montreal Forum were at a premium.

You're right, it's the colorful fiction serial which The Boston Evening American began this week and one indeed about which the whole town is talking. Only natural is the development of radio adaptation through Yankee Network stations so that listeners throughout the New England area can hear the action to date.

Characters have been daily ... hours of rigid rehearsal, are under way and the broadcast will reveal the trend of the story and provide a surprise or two in connection with the adventures of pretty Sheila [illegible]

Remark of Henry Ford Is Praised

Dearborn Sage Shows Wisdom in Recent Statement

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Financial Writer

IN THE MIDDLE WEST, Jan. 8 (INS)—There is statistical justification for the intuitive wisdom recently shown by Henry Ford when he remarked:

The sage of Dearborn added:

"When we made plenty of things that people use to live we were able to make them at low prices and people were able to buy them, and this made more work for more men.

"There is no way of changing that cycle, and no way of improving on it—working and using and making things better and easier to get is all there is to it—and the sooner we get back to that the better it will be."

STATEMENT CHECKED

I have checked up Mr. Ford's statement statistically, and find that it has a strong factual basis.

The League of Nations at Geneva each month publishes comparative statistics of industrial production for the principal nations of the world. It compares current or recent production in each nation with what it was in the same country in 1929. At no time did industrial production in the United States exceed the 1929 level except in the single month of December, 1936. At the end of September, it was but 93.3 per cent of the 1929 basis, and it has been declining ever since.

However, at the end of summer, Germany was producing at 119.3 per cent of the 1929 basis in that country.

Of the principal countries, only France and Belgium were making a relatively worse showing.

INDUSTRIAL OUTPUT

In 1936, when the United States produced at 88.1 per cent of the 1929 level, world industrial production stood at 110.5 per cent of the 1929 average. Of the industrial countries, Great Britain and Sweden stood highest in relative progress.

Lest these figures be misunderstood, they do not reflect the state of industrial progress in the different countries, but only the extent to which countries have recovered their own trend line which was interrupted during the depression.

This is all a highbrow way of confirming Mr. Ford's astute observation that we got off the track some years ago, and have not yet succeeded in returning.

The business of the United States bulks vastly larger in the world total than would be expected on a mere population basis, for we have but 6½ per cent of the world's population. A world economic survey, recently published by the League, states:

"The manufacturing output of all the industrial countries of western Europe is somewhat less than that of the United States alone and is divided among a number of national units, commerce between which is greatly hampered by governmental action."

LIVING STANDARDS

When it comes to cataloguing the reasons for getting off the track in the United States, one gets into the field of controversy, however, as a factual matter, it is well to keep in mind the unparalleled progress in living standards which were made under the American plan before the patchwork reforms growing out of the depression psychology.

The implication of Mr. Ford's remarks is that we can make progress by taking a step backward and getting on the main track again. Obviously, not all change is progress, but some in retrogression.

The new recession is likely to lead to an increased tendency to seek rationally to evaluate economic change.

Stock Leaders Gain 1 to 3 Points; Industrials Feature

W. O. Douglas for Dealer Group Legal Status

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 8 (INS)—In his first public address since he became chairman of the securities and exchange commission, William O. Douglas today had warned that failure of a program of self-regulation and self-discipline by the New York Stock Exchange and over-the-counter markets will force "the government to step in and do the job itself."

FOUR-POINT PLAN

Douglas, in outlining a four-point plan of self-imposed regulation in the investment banking fields and over-the-counter trading, said the plan was:

"A sincere desire to permit the great over-the-counter securities business of the country to forestall minutely detailed regulation at the hands of the governmental authority by the adoption of an effective scheme of self-regulation."

Douglas recommended: Thorough registration, to endow appropriately organized voluntary associations with a recognized legal status, similar to that accorded stock exchanges, the member being bound by contractural ties as are members of exchanges.

Second: Membership in such associations to be open to all who have not disqualified themselves by conduct clearly inconsistent with what reasonable men regard as fair and honest trade practice.

TO PROTECT INVESTORS

Third—Through democratic self-regulation by brokers and dealers under appropriate governmental supervision to promote just and equitable principles of trade, to prevent fraud and manipulative acts and practices, and to eliminate unreasonable profits and commissions; in general to protect investors by improving the character of the over-the-counter market and by insuring that it be free, open and competitive.

Fourth—To permit the effective disciplining of brokers and dealers who refuse to accept or abide by the standards of fair conduct erected by such associations in conformity with the statute.

Serves Notice on Pennroad Corp.

HARTFORD, Ct., Jan. 8 (AP)—The Pennroad Corporation was served notice today the governors of the six New England States would continue efforts to have its holdings of stock in two important New England railroads placed in the hands of public trustees.

The governors asserted in a letter to H. H. Lee, president of the corporation, they could see "no valid reason" for its refusal to accept the proposal to put under trusteeship its holdings in the New York, New Haven & Hartford and Boston & Maine Railroads.

The letter, made public here last night by Governor Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut, chairman of the New England governors' conference, asserted they would continue efforts to effect the "divorcement" from the two railroads of the Pennroad corporation and "all other outside influences which in their opinion are inimical to the development, prosperity and best interests of the New England railroads."

In another letter made public by Governor Cross, the New England chief executives notified President M. W. Clement of the Pennsylvania Railroad they had taken steps to carry out a plan whereby its holdings in the New Haven Railroad would be placed under trusteeship.

The Pennsylvania recently agreed to accept the plan, and the governors expressed confidence that "a satisfactory and amicable arrange- can be made to select the public trustees.

Profit Taking Shades Some Advances

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Stock market leaders switched over to the recovery today with favored industrials pushing up 1 to 3 or more points.

Dealings, slow at the start, picked up later. Profit realizing in the final half hour reduced extreme advances in some cases, but many issues closed around best levels of the day.

Motors pointed the way for the come-back as a rosier view was taken of prospects in this field. Chrysler and General Motors were principally favored.

STEELS, COPPERS UP

Steels, coppers and specialities were in the forefront of the come-back and even the rails, hesitant at the opening, stepped up in the concluding lap.

While some traders stood aside pending speeches of the President and other administrative officials at Jackson Day dinners tonight, some thought the markets may have discounted any further attacks which may be made on "big business."

Secondary rail bonds took on a show of strength, with observers generally looking to the government to assist roads in financial emergencies. Commodities were uneven.

Although those close to steel mill operations predicted a slight fall in production next week, shares of the major companies were in demand on the belief they would benefit eventually by armaments expansion. Coppers were aided by another boost in the export price for the metal.

SHARE GAINERS

Prominent on the climb were Chrysler, General Motors, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Smelting, Howe Sound, Cerro De Pasco, Westinghouse, General Electric, U. S. Rubber, Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, Chesapeake & Ohio, J. C. Penney, Newport Industries, Johns-Manville, Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, International Harvester, Loew's and Commercial Investment Trusts.

Reports the United Corp., half-billion-dollar Morgan-sponsored utility investment company, would file with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the Public Utility Holding Company Act, failed to stimulate or depress the power and light stocks unduly. Most, including U. G. I., were unchanged to up fractionally.

TIMELY TOPICS

Holders of motor shares noted announcements that Chrysler would resume assemblies of its four lines of automobiles Jan. 11, with the recalling of 53,000 employes, the same number on the payroll prior to suspension of operations for the holidays, and that ord would put 25,000 more men to work Jan. 17.

Nothwithstanding the recent sharp drop in public buying of new cars, some encouragement was found in the figures of the Automobile Manufacturers Association disclosing total 1937 factory sales passed the 5,000,000 mark for the second time in the history of the industry and was 8 per cent above the 1936 aggregate.

Sterling was up ⅛ of a cent at $5.00 ¼ in initial foreign currency transactions. The rench franc was .00 1-16 of a cent lower at 3.39 7-16 cents.

G. M. Dec. Sales Off Sharply

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—World sales of General Motors Corp., cars in December showed a sharp decrease under December, 1936, but sales for all of 1937 were 3.9 per cent above the figure for the preceding year, the company announced today.

December sales to dealers in the United States and Canada, together with shipments overseas, totaled 160,444 units, against 195,136 in November and 239,114 in December, 1936. For the year the total was 2,116,897, compared with 2,037,690 in 1936.

December sales to consumers in the United States totaled 89,682 cars, compared with 117,387 in November and 173,472 in December, 1936.

Forbes Urges Forward Push For Business

By B. C. FORBES

While many corporations are today reducing their sales efforts and otherwise pulling in their horns, one company is ready to launch a new million-dollar advertising campaign because it regards "the current business recession as a real business opportunity."

SCOUTS DEPRESSION

"We do not believe that a depression is upon us. The number of buyers who have given us checks in full payment convince us that plenty of people have the money to buy if you give them something they really want. To say we are in a buyers' strike is absurd. Buyers strike because they refuse to pay for outmoded merchandise. Give them something new. And by all means when you have a real improvement, tell the buyers about it! There never existed a greater opportunity for forward thinking than now."

This company is to spend a big part of its million-dollar appropriation in the first four months of the year to expand sales of its new automatic home laundry. This, notwithstanding that orders already on hand are enough to keep the factory at capacity for four months.

PRAISES NEWSPAPERS

"This would cause some manufacturers to reduce merchandising efforts and advertising appropriations," says Mr. Sayre. "We, however, are multiplying our efforts."

He adds:

"In a spotty business condition like the present, we find the use of daily newspapers give us excellent flexibility and control. We plan to spend more than half a million dollars in newspapers alone this year, on a single home laundry . . . our double spreads in color in leading magazines will have relatively little competition from other manufacturers for readers' attention. Therefore, we believe we will receive more for our money's worth."

Isn't this the spirit which has built up America?

LONG TIME EMPLOYES

Western Electric today has 15,787 employes of 10 years' service or longer. This is about 35 per cent of the total working force of approximately 45,000. While 6019 have had from 10 to 15 years' service, no fewer than 4904 from 15 to 20 years', 2674 from 20 to 25 years', 2190 over 25 years', with 21 men and one woman with more than 40 years' service.

Western Electric enjoys an enviable reputation for the treatment of its work-people. Because of the extreme intricacy and delicacy of many of the things it manufactures, highly technical skill is essential. The company furnishes the Bell System with its telephone apparatus. This involves manufacturing 43,000 different items.

OUTLINES POLICY

Most companies like to talk about how much money they make. President Edgar S. Bloom, of Western Electric, on the other hand, emphasizes that its policy always has been to reduce prices wherever possible and declares:

"In recent years it has earned on its investment a rate of return only about half as large as that of a representative group of comparable manufacturers, and over a period of 20 years this rate has averaged less than seven per cent."

When it comes to inventing, manufacturing and adapting telephone facilities, America has no competitor.

6 Governors Ask Neutral N. E. Rail Boards

Conference Counsel Shapes Plan For Reorganization

Plans to reorganize the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads to serve New England interests better were being shaped today by Charles A. McCarron of Boston, counsel to the New England Governors' Conference.

The move, according to Governor Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut, chairman of the six-state conference, involves the creation of a neutral trusteeship over the roads' stock.

In this manner it is hoped to divorce New England railroads from "all other outside influences inimical to the development, prosperity and best interests of the New England railroads."

ONE ROAD READY

Arrangements to bring this about for the New Haven Road will be made soon, Governor Cross declared. The New Haven stock is controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad.

This line is willing to enter into the plan, the Connecticut chief executive asserted in a letter requesting similar co-operation from H. H. Lee, president of the Penn-road Corporation, which owns stock in both the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads.

Declaring the New England governors will "continue their efforts to effect by legal and proper means the divorcement" of the two roads from outside interests, Governor Cross wrote the Pennroad official:

"It seems to us that no valid reason can now exist for your present refusal to do that which in 1934 you expressed a willingness to do and which today the corporation responsible for the existence of the Pennroad Corporation, namely the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, has expressed a willingness to do."

SIX SIGN LETTER

All six New England governors signed this letter and another to M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Company.

In this second missive, the governors expressed their appreciation for the co-operation of Mr. Clement's company and informed him that McCarron was preparing a trust indenture "which will effectively carry out the proposed trusteeship to any stock" in the New Haven owned by the Pennsylvania.

The Connecticut governor said McCarron had been instructed to communicate with the Pennsylvania line president and submit the indenture prepared to the Governors' Conference and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Check Sales Tax Of 70,000 Stores

CHICAGO, Jan. 8 (INS)—Fifty special investigators from Southern Illinois are today headed for Chicago to investigate sales tax returns of every one of the city's 70,000 merchants, following revelations the state has lost "probably millions of dollars" through graft in the Chicago sales tax office.

As an early result of the sales tax expose, warrants were obtained by the Attorney General's office today against 21 Chicago merchants, charging them with failing to file returns. Civil suits to collect tax were prepared against 27 others.

Seize Suspect In Girl Murder

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 8 (INS)—State police here today arrested Lawrence McCarthy, 36, paroled convict, as a suspect in the murder of Melba Moore, 16-year-old Granger, Ind., girl mysteriously shot from ambush October 12.

Arrested on an automobile theft charge, McCarthy had been named by a former landlady, Mrs. Cecil Hawkins of South Bend, as the possible killer of the Moore girl. The bullet that killed the Moore girl as she rode in an automobile with two companions was intended for Mrs. Hawkins, the woman declared.

Trading in Wool Goods Still Slow

Business Expected To Be More Active After Inventories Are Taken

NEW YORK, Jan. 8—Markets for wool goods were slow this week as buyers and sellers continued to struggle with inventory checking and the preparation of financial statements, according to the New York Wool Top Exchange Service. It seems that the work of estimating stocks will take until January 10, after which business is expected to resume on a slightly more active scale than in December.

"While stocks of clothing are large compared with a year ago, they have been reduced substantially in the last few weeks by successful clearance sales and the marking down of prices to levels which are attractive to consumers," says the Exchange Service.

"Business in men's wear markets, meanwhile, is confined to small fill-in orders, mostly for fancy weaves which are not carried in stock by mills. The price tone during the week was firm. Toward the close of the period, sentiment became cheerful following the presidential pronouncements on the government's attitude toward industry. A number of mills re-opened during the week after shutdowns of four to six weeks.

MEN'S WEAR

"Aside from fill-in orders for occasional lots of chalk stripes, herringbone cheviots, and other fancies, men's wear markets were without feature. Tropical worsteds and gabardines continued to move in fair volume. Staples were in slow demand. The idea is now generally held that business will not pick up much before March, when mills will start to show lines for the coming fall and winter season. To date, mills have booked only about 40 per cent of their normal spring business and do not look for any sharp expansion in sales over the next few months.

"However, all sections of the trade are aware of the fact that demand for piece goods and clothing is unpredictable and that consumers who have been out of the market for months may enter it along about Easter. This has happened in the past and retailers and wholesalers were caught without the goods to supply them. Overcoatings moved slowly despite the fact that sales of these heavy garments at retail were the largest in some time. Buyers continued to sample mackinaws without placing much actual business. Topcoatings were sluggish.

WOMEN'S WEAR

"Some activity developed in women's wear markets this week. Buyers came in for fair quantities of popular priced coatings, chiefly shetlands, tweeds, and fleeces. Prices were firm. Dress goods sold in encouraging volume. Indications are that women's wear mills will book a normal business for spring.

"While cloak and suit manufacturers are operating cautiously, they are not resisting current prices and regard them as productive of volume business. Reorders for cloaks and suits were larger, coming chiefly from salesmen on the road. Stocks of fall and winter garments are much smaller than they were and are being rapidly cleared at special sales.

Towns Demand Curb in Power Of State ABC

Selectmen in Fight To Bring About 'Home Rule'

The Massachusetts Selectmen's Association today resumed sessions at the State House, determined to seek legislation to curb powers of the Alcohol Beverages Control Commission.

A move to establish "home rule" for towns and cities in their efforts to control liquor problems was revealed at the opening sessions.

Chairman Arthur Cook of the Athol selectmen argued for "home rule," saying his board had refused a common victuallers' license in order to block granting of liquor license by the state commission.

He said a bill was then passed in the Legislature which denied selectmen the right to act in this manner.

He hinted "influences" were at work in the commission.

Another who protested activities of the Commission was Selectman Everett Calahan, Weymouth.

He said he intended to file a bill to take away the commission's power to reverse local rulings, or to act at all in a town matter until it at least consults 50 registered town voters.

Torch Woman's Inquest Due

An inquest into the death of Mrs. Jennie Andelman of Cambridge, whose charred body was found in one of her Tewksbury cottages October 15, probably will be held in Lowell district court next week.

Request for the inquest will be made by District Attorney Warren L. Bishop of Middlesex county, who is anxious to clear up an apparent mystery in the circumstances of her death.

Neighbors reported there had been fires previously in Mrs. Andelman's cottages, detectives said. Frank Simpson, 57, Tewksbury handyman, volunteered the information at East Cambridge court house yesterday that a fire two years ago in a cottage in the vicinity was caused by an overheated stove.

Chute Family Continues Act

Brockton Man Takes Dead Girl's Place

BATAVIA, N. Y., Jan. 8 (AP)—Because Gloria Allen wanted it so, the parachute act in which she lost her life last September will be continued this year by her brother, her sister, and a new jumper.

So the "Flying Allens" will continue to be billed at the fairs of the nation in their spectacular leaps from hot-air balloons. Brother Eddie, 20, and sister Florence, 17, will flank a new jumper in the triple descent made famous by them and Gloria.

Edward S. Allen, father, trainer and manager of the "Allen Kids," announced that he has engaged Romeo Moreau of Brockton, Mass., to ride the center chute formerly ridden by Gloria.

Seek Ship Director

HAMBURG, Jan. 8 (AP)—The German government today sought a new managing-director to operate the Arnold Bernstein shipping lines and pay off the convicted Jewish merchant's American creditors.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

SATURDAY,
JANUARY 8, 1938

+ + Who is he that will harm you if ye be followers of that which is good?—1 Peter III., 13. + +

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Edward A Elliott, Methodist Church, Exeter street, Boston. The next text will be suggested by the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

The Editor Says:

THE PRESENT depression, reduced to its simplest terms, combines the fatal effects of UNEMPLOYED PEOPLE and UNSOLD GOODS.

Whatever industry can do to change this situation through employing more people and paying better wages SHOULD BE DONE.

Whatever the Government can do to HELP industry sell goods and employ people should also be done.

But in addition the people should also do what they can to HELP THEMSELVES.

We are falling far short of doing everything in our power to help ourselves, as Mr. Hearst said in his Sunday editorial:

> "When we spend what money we have for foreign products and are unable to buy our American products."

The inevitable result of that foolish practice, as Mr. Hearst said and all sensible people must agree, is that:

> "We make prosperity abroad and DEPRESSION AT HOME."

Spending our money for foreign goods, leaving our own wares unsold and our own workers idle, is not good Americanism and it is not good sense.

As a people, we can do a tremendous lot of good for ourselves by concentrating our purchasing power in American institutions, which pay wages befitting our standard of living.

BUY AMERICAN

—is our best motto always. Our people should never buy foreign goods in preference to American goods, particularly when to do so MAKES DEPRESSION FOR THEMSELVES.

And our Government should not make the temptation great by giving the products of foreign peasant labor PREFERRED STATUS in the American market in competition with goods in which the American standard of labor is a major item of cost.

It is an obligation of American industry to PAY AMERICAN WAGES.

And it is an obligation of the American Government to PROTECT its own industries and ITS OWN PEOPLE.

MR. TOBIN'S DEMAND

—for a fair share of the Massachusetts gasoline tax revenue for Boston may displease Governor Hurley, but it will delight most Bostonians, automobile-owning Bostonians especially.

The reason is clear. Last year Boston motorists paid 10 per cent of the money that the State collected from the levy on gasoline. But all that Boston received was 5 per cent. The lion's share went elsewhere.

The trouble is that the spending of the gasoline tax proceeds leaves much to be desired. Although motorists were always assured that they were paying the assessment for better roads, Governor Hurley a year ago took $7,500,000 of the money and spent it to make his $71,450,000 budget seem less burdensome.

FINANCIAL JUGGLING

—seldom succeeds in the long run, and Mr. Hurley is learning that his particular brand is no exception. The story is as short as it is sad—for the taxpayers and for those who want jobs.

Having discovered that the Hurley Administration was using gasoline tax money to pay salaries, to provide officials with spending money and to do things not even remotely related to highways, the Federal Government acted promptly.

From Washington came the report that because Mr. Hurley spent the $7,500,000 in the manner he did, Massachusetts would not get a dollar of the $1,500,000 of "free" money that had been promised for new highways.

Attorney General Dever is now in Washington begging the authorities to change their minds. He is doing his utmost to prevent the Governor from being remembered as the man whose mistake cost Massachusetts a million and a half dollars that might have been spent to give work to the unemployed.

We can only pray that he will be successful. Ten thousand jobless men could use that money.

JOSEPH A. MAYNARD

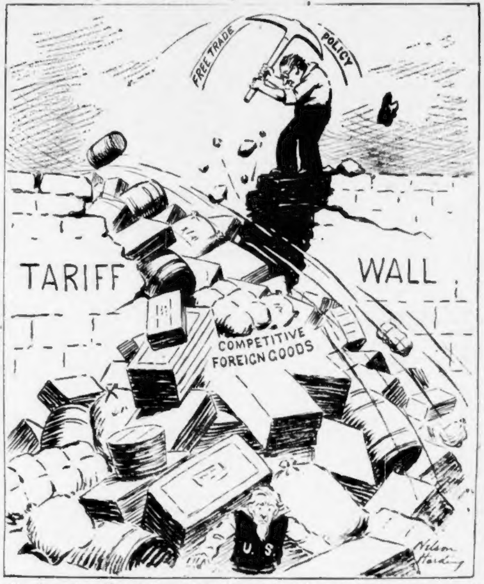
—is dead, and Boston and Massachusetts mourn his passing. From many officials and from all cities and towns come tributes testifying to the love and esteem in which the late Collector of the Port of Boston was held.

An outstanding citizen, a successful businessman and a tireless worker for the Democratic Party, Mr. Maynard was known from one end of the State to the other.

Sharing the sadness that all who knew this popular official must feel, we join with the thousands of his other friends in extending sincerest condolences to Mrs. Maynard.

The Boy at Our Dyke

By
Nelson Harding



The legendary Dutch Boy plugged a hole in the dyke and saved the dyke—thereby saving Holland from a devastating flood.

The Boy at our dyke is the Government's policy of slashing our protective tariff wall by means of "reciprocity" treaties—thereby causing our home market to be flooded with the foreign products of pauper labor.

New York Day by Day

By
O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.

THIS will be one of those slap-happy efforts. Like plucking the scraps from a rag bag and weaving them into something or other. And, by the way, the old patchwork quilt has been revived. Many's the beautiful work of this patient art I've shivered under.

As a logolept, I still delight in those classic old quilt names, patterns of which were known to thousands on farms and at county fairs. Such as The Rail Fence, The Churn Dash, Young Ladies' Ramble and The Goose Chase. Most popular was the log cabin, 21 pieces to the square.

How many family memories were pieced into those quilts! A chink of father's necktie, ditto mother's wedding dress, Elizabeth's green party frock and Aunt Dora's best sateen. And always that bit of lavender plaid from little Patience's Sunday best, in which she was buried.

Most people have noticed that Helen Keller is always photographed from her right side. When younger there was a question in the minds of friends whether or not to have a blemish on her cheek removed and it was finally decided it might cause her mental anguish to tell her about it. The same council of friends persuaded her never to marry.

An idee fixe in the movies is the framed photograph. Always a huge face taken front view in the best commercial manner. Never a portrait by Genthe or Steinlen, never a face with a soul. But a staring exhibitionist and always in a wide silver frame on the southwest corner for the movie star to snatch up and swoon over. This is what the movie directors call "Suggestion."

Beauty hint: There's no doubt that even better than a nail file, the most effective instrument for cleaning the nails is the serrated edge of a folded newspaper. But don't let anyone catch you doing it. It characterizes you as what Gelett Burgess calls a bripkin. And is one of the subway pastimes.

A human reminder of a time when the legitimate theater flourished is the jovial millionaire Frank Vance Storrs and his block long black limousine with the snow white doors. When the Rialto had more than 90 theaters running full blast, Storrs had the program rights for all, programs filled with costly luxury advertising which he furnished to producers free. This revenue was the basis of his fortune. At top season today there are less than 20 productions on the boards. Many believe in another season or so the list will be thinned to a dozen.

Gag: Frank and Berthe Case were recently invited to spend the week-end at the country place of Percy Waxman, well-known magazine editor. In the guest room and the bath adjoining Mrs. Case noticed several towels on which were unmistakably the Algonquin Hotel mark. She politely pretended not to notice this and tried to distract her husband's attention, but there was no hiding the fact. To make it just a little more horrible, upon retiring it was discovered that the sheets and pillow cases on the beds were from their hotel.

Not until they returned to their hotel did they learn that Waxman had connived with an assistant manager to borrow the linen for the sole purpose of shocking his guests.

My notion of high in jobs is that of a clerk at the newsstand in a large railroad terminal, such as Grand Central or Pennsylvania. To sit on a high stool with a commanding view of the swirl of crowds—there's an especial glamour reserved for travelers—is excitement enough for anyone, but added to that is to have all the latest periodicals and freshest newspaper editions at elbow.

But one man's meat is another man's poison indeed. One of the fortunate holders of such a job tells me he never reads a magazine and scans only the headlines of newspapers. As for crowds, they make him sick.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Disclosure by Attorney-General Cummings that more persons were imprisoned last year for Federal liquor law violations than in any prohibition year does not necessarily mean there is more bootlegging now than before repeal. Enforcement may have been more vigorous. And there isn't any question that enforcement of liquor laws now is easier than it was during prohibition. Public sentiment is more on the side of the law now than then.

Most of the Federal law offenders who were punished during the last fiscal year were found in possession of or selling liquor on which the Federal tax had not been paid. There is nothing about which Uncle Sam is more concerned than getting the tax dollars due him. The fact that the Government needs the money so badly easily explains why Federal agents are so alert to catch those who are not paying the Federal liquor taxes.

Railroads are advised by the Interstate Commerce Commission in its annual report to Congress to make their service more attractive. That is exactly what they have been doing for several years.

No development in the history of railroading has contributed more to the comfort of railway travelers than air conditioning.

It has made trains more comfortable, so far as temperature is concerned, than the great majority of homes. Modern streamlined trains, with their easier riding and faster schedules, have made rail service far more attractive than it ever had been before.

The improvements made by the railroads have cost a lot of money.

Human Side of the News

By
Edwin C. Hill

THOSE ROMANOFFS have a way of popping up in the news. The Bolsheviki did the best they could to put an end to the lot of them, when they dragged the Czar and Czarina and their five daughters and son to a cellar in a Siberian town and shot them to death.

But they're still around—the Romanoff kin. The Grand Duke Cyril is in London, I believe, still cherishing the hope of a Romanoff restoration, and the Grand Duke Dmitri has just lost a very handsome wife.

The former Audrey Emery of New York, who became the Princeses Ilyinskaia by her marriage to Dmitri, has just been granted a divorce from him. Perhaps she grew weary of hearing him tell the story of how he and Prince Youssoupoff put a period to the career of that infamous lunatic Rasputin.

I don't suppose there ever was a story quite like it. It was much more than a slight case of murder, the killing of the Mad Monk, Rasputin, by the Grand Duke Dmitri of the royal house of Romanoff and Prince Youssoupoff of the Old Russian nobility.

Rasputin was a coarse and illiterate animal, yet possessed of a strange and sinister personality. Nicholas, the Czar, and his consort were religious to a superstitious degree, and fearfully concerned over the health of their only son. Rasputin played upon all these emotions until he had them completely in his power. For several years he was the real ruler of Russia—this dark spirit.

The time came when the nobles close to the imperial court in St. Petersburg rose against him. On the night of December the sixteenth, 1916, the Grand Duke Dmitri and Prince Youssoupoff, who is as well known in this country and in England as he was in St. Petersburg, sent the Mad Monk a message which so intrigued him that he descended to the cellar of the palace, where Dmitri and Felix Youssoupoff were waiting.

Youssoupoff himself told the story on the witness stand in court in London, as the plaintiff in a suit against the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Motion Picture Company. In the tense atmosphere of a crowded court room in modern London, the tall, slim prince, fastidiously dressed in conventional English morning clothes, calmly related the whole terrible story.

First of all, he smiled upon the Mad Monk, cajoled him and flattered him, while he fed him wine and poisoned cakes—enough poisoned cakes to have killed half a dozen ordinary men. But Rasputin was not an ordinary man. He had the vitality of some prehistoric monster, which, indeed, he resembled. And when the poison failed to take effect, Prince Youssoupoff shot him with a pistol borrowed from the Grand Duke Dmitri. The first shot had little effect, and then they fired three bullets into the Mad Monk's body.

But the Mad Monk was still too strong for death. He might have lived if Youssoupoff had not beaten him over the head with a loaded cane until his dark spirit was wrenched loose from its mortal shell.

The successors of the Romanoffs don't appear to be doing so well. Stalin, modern Robespierre, has sent eight more suspected counter-revolutionaries to the firing squad—most of them, like Leo Karakhan, "old Bolshevists"; original Bolsheviki who helped Nicolai Lenin and Trotzky overthrow the old regime. Secret trials; secret executions.

It seems appalling that Europe and America should look upon this barbarism as a paradise, and should for a moment think of it as a way of life that could be borne by Englishmen or Frenchmen or Americans. I take my stand without equivocation or obscurity. Let the oppressed fight as they will for bread and butter. It is their right. But let some of us, at least, fire a shot for our old goddess, Liberty, "the most precious inheritance of modern man."

March of Events

WHEN the world recovers sufficiently from the atrocities perpetrated left and right in China by the Japanese, it will uncover the greatest and most pathetic tragedy of modern times—THE DESERTION OF 400,000,000 OF THEIR COUNTRYMEN BY THE RULERS AND THE GENERALS OF CHINA.

A despatch in the NEW YORK TIMES of recent date from its Shanghai correspondent makes these frightful revelations:

> "In many cases the individual generals have been more concerned with the safety of their personal wealth and their vast land-holdings in the path of the Japanese invaders than with the defense of their country."

And further:

> "The enlightened, foreign-educated leaders of the Nanking government, who spent millions of dollars on fine public buildings, on expensive trips to Europe and America and on ill-chosen aerial equipment, must eventually answer the question: Why, while for the last three years China has been inevitably drifting toward war with Japan, was almost nothing spent on provision to care for the wounded?"

The correspondent, Hallett Abend, intimates that the shameful retreat of the Chinese was due mainly to what are called "silver bullets"—Japanese bribes to Chinese commanders.

If these charges are true, it seems to me that China is doomed from one end to the other, for the sword of Japan could possibly be broken, but the cancer of COMMUNISM, NATIONAL CORRUPTION and GREED means sure death.

Look in the mirror. Can you see an aura at the top of your head? Don't laugh. It's there. Science now says so.

Dr. Gibbs is famous for his studies in epilepsy and electrical wave-prints of the brain. He says—and here the aura is explained—that the human brain "is something like a storm-cloud and the individual brain-cells may be likened to the atoms or molecules of water which produce by their vibrations the different colors of the rainbow."

All substances give off a glow. The brain glows and vibrates with intelligence, if any, in the eyes, in the face. So why not right through the skull in the shape of an aura?

The aura is, after all, not "spiritual" or "supernatural," but merely an electrical emanation, the coloring of which is determined by the high or low vibration of your thought-beats.

A Pontiac, Michigan, reader of the "MARCH OF EVENTS" asks this extraordinary question:

> "We are going to have a World War. Why not have it now and be done with it?"

It is the same thing as if our reader had asked millions of men, "You've got to die some day, why not die now?"

Also, he is wrong when he thinks that when a war is over we are "done with it." We are not done with the last war, and will never be. It saddled as many ills on us after the Armistice as it did before. Another World War would be more disastrous than a universal earthquake. It would not only never be "done" with us, but it would "doom" us forever.

The Political Parade

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.

THE opening of the 1938 Congressional campaign—and the starting gun will soon be fired in the primary sweepstakes—will still further reveal the fundamental cause of the widening breach between the President and his overwhelmingly Democratic Congress.

The depression, the disastrous effect it is having on small business in all but a few scattered States, and the recent vitriolic attacks upon industry by Ickes and Jackson are threatening the seats of a great number of Democratic members of the House, now sitting there by virtue of majorities of six or seven thousand or under.

Primary and election prospects for House Democrats have changed for the worse during the past few weeks. The shadow of increasing unemployment chills the erstwhile cheery Democratic politician to his very marrow.

Mr. Roosevelt is threatened by the loss of control in the new House which will be elected this year.

Doubtless he has been informed of this fear by party leaders in Congress.

If not, it is because he is not consulting those who could tell him.

There is an ample "literature" on this subject now piling up, so to speak, in Democratic cloak rooms at the Capitol.

The speeches of Secretary Ickes, of the Cabinet, and of Bob Jackson, of the "Little Cabinet," were like a squirt of poison to most Democrats, now grooming for their first hurdles, the primaries which will begin early in April.

Their plans of October, to run for re-election on the "we planned it that way" platform, have been kicked into the proverbial cocked hat.

They were waiting for Mr. Roosevelt in his annual message to point the way to constructive business recovery.

Instead of that, on the eve of the awaited address, came the devastating blasts from two of the President's closest counsellors.

This has brought about a change in campaign plans in many a harassed Congressional mind.

And it will be a significant change. For the first time in five years many House Democrats up for renomination and re-election will shape their own independent campaigns. This means they must establish independent records.
